One Big Thing Done.
A New White Slavery.
Big Servant Problem.
The Marvelous French.
By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Next come the great football games, with peace, Naval armament reduction and other minor affairs of life sandwiched in between the games.

A COMMITTEE of fourteen says night clubs are responsible for today's vice, or some of it.

Old "white slave dealers" are antiquated.

The night club owners engage young women through employment agencies, many of them deliberately and knowingly purveyors of vice.

YOUNG women think that they are engaged as dancing instructors. It is the old "white slave" business, on a somewhat different basis with bootlegging as an adjunct.

FRENCH women face a serious servant girl problem, but they will get little sympathy from American housewives. Women in France complain bitterly because they have to pay a really good cook $16 a month and board.

"EXTRAVAGANT AMERICANS" are blamed for the high wages and exaggerated demands of modern French servants. They even ask for hot running water in the kitchen and object to having only a candle for a bedroom light.

It is different in this country.

Just now France is a little bothered by Mussolini's rebuilding of the old Roman empire and its habits, which included the disagreeable custom of traveling north over the Alps.

The French government is spending $100,000,000, real dollars, not francs, increasing the strength of Alpine fortifications.

The French believe in peace, like it, want it. They also believe in safety and being prepared.

FRANCE has accumulated one thousand millions of dollars in New York, a good American BILLION, equivalent to twenty-five billions of French francs, as much in real money as Bismarck took from France after the war of 1870. The explanation of such extraordinary resources is simple. FRENCHMEN WORK, AND SAVE.

AT home, France is cutting one billion francs from heavy taxes now laid on the French people, and the tax reduction favors large families first of all, with a big reduction in taxes on wages and salaries.

DR. FREDERICK TILNEY, professor of neurology at Columbia University, warns you that a headache is a serious thing. There are 16 different kinds of headaches, all requiring particular care and understanding.

Headaches often come from anxiety and you should be cautious about taking medicine to kill a headache.

It may kill the headache, while the forces that cause the headache continue working to kill you.

DOCTORS from Belgium, Switzerland, Germany and Holland are touring the wine region of the Gironde in France, well supplied with samples of different wines. They will give learned reports on those wines and their effect upon the human system.

THE ancient Gauls thought they settled that question long ago.

They came traveling toward the southwest until they reached the land where Burgundy and Bordeaux wines grow. There they stopped and settled down, saying "this is far enough. This is the place to live."

THEY are still living there.

And although they have persistently refused to adopt ice water as a steady drink, they have produced some interesting men, from Charlemagne to Napoleon, from Sully to Clemenceau, from Molier to Pasteur.

RAMSAY MACDONALD has gone, taking his fine young daughter with him. Today he is in Canada, greatest dominion of the Great British empire, of which he, a self-educated workman and an intelligent Socialist, is prime minister.

IT is no longer necessary to see a great man to know what he is.

You read what he says, see his photographs, hear his voice on the radio, and you know him.

The country knows, admires and likes Ramsay MacDonald.

EVERY intelligent man must praise the common sense and balance of the British empire, which goes its way evenly under the direction of a Tory, Liberal, or Socialist.

It is not the kind of GOVERNMENT you have, but the kind of PEOPLE you have, that is important.

THE British R-101, biggest dirigible in the world, flew over London yesterday, carrying 52 passengers, circling the dome of St. Paul's, about 600 feet up, an airplane flying ahead, acting as pilot.

THOSE living will see giant ships of the air, 1,000 feet long, and longer, with smaller ships, flying back and forth, bringing passengers from the ground to the high altitude, where there are no storms, and bringing supplies.

Take care of your health; live as long as you can. You will see interesting things in the years immediately ahead.

SLOAN GUILTY OF THIRD HOLDUP

Convicted in Tech, Hays and Ruud Robberies, Bandit Continues 10 More Trials

For the third time within a week, John B. Sloan, payroll bandit, was found guilty on robbery charges by a jury in Criminal Court today.

Along with Robert Kitzinger he was convicted in the Ruud Manufacturing Company $6,000 payroll holdup. Two alleged accomplices, Henry Zadach and Joseph Maloney, had pleaded guilty and turned state's evidence.

NEW TRIAL TOMORROW

Sloan previously had been found guilty with Kitzinger in the $10,500 Tech Food Products payroll robbery and alone in the attempted holdup of the Hays National Bank.

Tomorrow Sloan is scheduled to go o ntrial charged with robbing Mrs. Hedwig Griebel, 2400 Spring Garden avenue, of $2,300. He is alleged to have compelled the woman to disclose the hiding place of her money.

Nine other robbery cases besides the Griebel holdup are pending against Sloan. "I will stand trial in every one of them," he says.

BOXER CONFUSED

Sloan's alibi in the Ruud case was that he had gone to Columbus, O., the night before the robbery on April 26 to second a friend in a boxing bout, but the bout was called off. The boxer became confused on the witness stand, but Sloan followed him to the stand and blandly told his story. Assistant District Attorney Earl A. Jackson at one point asked Sloan how he managed to live to be 34 without ever having worked and Sloan replied that he had $6,000, of which

CAPONE EXPOSE PROVES MYTH

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—State's attorneys dissolved as a "myth" today the characterization of Frank Biege as the arch executioner for "Scarface" Al Capone, but held the man for investigation on a charge of extortion. The prosecutors denied they had connected Biege with the major crimes of gangland.

Biege has been under arrest since Saturday, and local newspapers published letters purporting to have been written to Capone in his Philadelphia jail cell by Biege's wife, demanding $10,000 for his safe exit from Chicago. Biege was pictured in the letters as Capone's staff slayer.

The letters, county officers declared today, were fictitious.

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Retrial of the $100,000 suit charging physical and spiritual damages, brought by Miss Marcia Estardus, 26-year-old entertainer, against Harry K. Thaw, today was postponed for 24 hours.

Supreme Court Justice Aaron Levy, in granting only a 24-hour delay in the trial, declared that under no circumstances would another continuance be authorized.

Miss Estardus alleges she was beaten in the apartment of the Pittsburgh millionaire here on New Year's day of 1927. Defense counsel denies the allegations and charges the plaintiff is attempting to blackmail the defendant.

FIRST JURY DISAGREES

At the first trial of the action, a jury disagreed on a verdict and was discharged.

Since then Thaw has had his economic stature enhanced and this fact will probably be commented upon by counsel for the plaintiff.

International News Service.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—The French cabinet today decided to accept Great Britain's invitation to the proposed five-power naval conference to be held in London in the early part of next year.

ITALY ACCEPTS

LONDON, Oct. 15. — Participation of the five principal naval powers in the disarmament conference scheduled here in January was assured today when Italy's acceptance to Britain's invitation to take part was received by the foreign office. The United States accepted first of all, and its official acceptance has already been received by the British foreign office.

As sponsor of the conference, England is naturally in line and convocation of the conference, a direct result of peace negotiations of President Hoover and Premier Ramsay MacDonald, now appears certain.

Two stumbling-blocks, both of which will probably be ironed out without great difficulty, face the projected conference. One is Italy's reported insistence on naval parity with France, which the latter nation is not inclined to recognize, maintaining that Italy has only the Mediterraneau to patrol, while France has need for an ocean fleet as well. It is thought that parity on the Mediterranean only will solve this problem.

The other obstacle is France's opposition to Germany's reported intention to seek authorization for six 10,000-ton cruisers.

JAPAN O. K.'S REPLY

TOKIO, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—The Japanese cabinet today approved the final draft of the Japanese reply to the British invitation to a naval disarmament conference. The draft will be sent to the Japanese ambassador as soon as the Emperor's sanction is obtained.

Government officials were loath to discuss the contents of the reply but newspapers professing to have reliable information said it would contain four points, as follows:

(1) Emphasizing Japan's satisfaction that Great Britain and the United States already have reached a basic agreement.

(2) Expresing Japanese willingness to participate in the conference in accordance with the spirit of the Kellogg-Briand anti-war pact.

(3) Offering to do everything possible by way of preliminary conversations to clear the way for a successful conference.

(4) Expressing a sincere desire that the conference may aim at definite reduction of naval armaments.

It was expected the note would be dispatched to London tomorrow.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—In a farewell message today to the American people, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald said he left the United States "rich with the proof that while the Atlantic divides us, the cause of peace unites us."

The British statesman read his statement to a group of British and American correspondents just before he set out for a trip around the American side of the falls which carries him across the international boundary and back on British soil after 12 days in this country on a good will mission without precedent in the relations of the United States and Britain.

Wales, Brother, in Planes, View Giant Dirigible

LONDON, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—The Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, yesterday, it became known today, went in airplanes to meet the dirigible R-101 making its trial voyage.

The British heir was in a Gypsy Moth piloted by E. Fielden, while Prince George was in his elder brother's old blue Moth, piloted by Squadron Leader Don.

Both took off shortly after noon from Sunningdale, Berkshire, and toured the home counties in search of the dirigible. They finally found it, and after circling it and viewing it from the air both returned to Northolt, Middlesex.

Few if any of the 52 passengers and crew of the dirigible realized two of the most important young men in England were included among the passengers of planes escorting the giant ship.

TARIFF EXPERT SAYS LOBBY TRIED TO GET HIM 'FIRED'

TRUTH HURT, SENATORS TOLD

Commission Member Relates Potters' Ire at Statistics As Inquiry Gets Under Way

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—A story of how the pottery industry sought the dismissal of an expert from the United States Tariff Commission because he told the truth to Congress was revealed today at the opening session of the Senate's lobby inquiry.

Frederick L. Koch, chief of the ceramic division of the commission, charged the pottery industry with trying to get him fired because of the data he gave to Congress. He blamed William Burgess, former commissioner, now representing the United States Pottery Association, with leading the fight for his dismissal.

FACTS ADMITTED CORRECT

"The startling fact," Koch told the Senate committee, "was that Mr. Burgess admitted my facts were not incorrect, but he complained that they were detrimental to the pottery industry.

"They had no complaint to find with the facts I gave Congress, but argued I shouldn't have given them."

"Mr. Burgess wanted you dismissed because you told the truth?"

"That seemed to be his purpose."

The activity of lobbyists for the pottery industry was the first subject taken up by the committee.

STATISTICS ATTACKED

Koch first told of testifying before the House Ways and Means Committee. He said his statistical data was attacked by Republican members of the committee, apparently because it did not justify an increase in tariff duties on pottery.

"After my appearance, Mr. Burgess appeared before the commission and preferred charges against me," said Koch. "He claimed my testimony was prejudiced and biased."

Koch also told how H. R. Wyllie, president of a pottery company at Huntington, W. Va., had written President Hoover urging his dismissal. Koch said Wyllie charged him with being "against the best interests of his government, the pottery industry and labor."

Karl Langenbeck, former head of the ceramic division, next told the committee how he had been dismissed from the same position in 1924 because of differences with Burgess, then a member of the commission. Langenbeck said he differed with Burgess over the possibility of manufacturing hard porcelain in this country.

MARVIN ON STAND

The activity of Thomas O. Marvin, now chairman of the United States Tariff Commission, as a "high protectionist," prior to his appointment in 1921, was investigated next.

Marvin told of resigning an $8,000 a year job as secretary of the Home Market Club of Massachusetts to become a commissioner at $7,500 a year.

Marvin told of club members calling on him at the commission for tariff information. When the committee insisted on his naming some of these visitors, Marvin gave the names of F. W. Hogg, president of the Arlington mills; William H. Cliff, present secretary of the Home Market Club; Ward Thoron, Malcolm Whitcomb and other representatives of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, and Horace Cheney, a silk manufacturer.

Marvin also told how Joseph R. Grundy, Pennsylvania tariff lobbyist, had visited him.

TALKED WITH GRUNDY

"I should say that while I was secretary of the club, Mr. Grundy was a member of the club, but not an active member," said Marvin. "Mr. Grundy has called on me two or three times. On the first occasion he spoke to me about methods of valuation. The latter times he spoke about the classification of imported wool rags."

Marvin then told of Burgess, the pottery lobbyist, seeking the dismissal of Koch, the expert. Marvin said Burgess "complained about the attitude of Mr. Koch at the hearings."

"Mr. Burgess said Koch had sent slips of paper to senators with suggestions for questions at the hearing," said Marvin. "He said the commission ought to investigate the matter and if Koch was found prejudiced or biased, I suppose he wanted the commission to discharge him. Anyway, I got the impression that he was opposed to our retaining him."

STEEL ORE INVOLVED

Senator Blaine (Rep.), of Wisconsin, suddenly switched the inquiry to manganese ore. He asked Marvin to produce all correspondence relating to manganese ore between the commission and the steel industry.

The manganese ore question has agitated Congress ever since the Senate Finance Committee placed it on the free list just before reporting the new tariff bill. Two senators were said to have switched their votes after the committee twice voted to retain a duty on the ore. Placing it on the free list, it was explained at the time, would benefit the steel industry.

DENIES BEING LOBBYIST

Burgess, called to the stand, denied being a lobbyist and boasted of being a "friend of Woodrow Wilson."

Burgess first told of resigning from the commission in July, 1925.

"I thought it a waste of time to continue on a tariff commission, hampered as it was by a deadlock and by the restrictions of the law, limiting changes to costs of production."

Burgess said he had an offer from the Potters' Association before he left the commission.

The association paid him $7,500 a year, although his salary had been $5,000 a year.

"Did they think your personal contact with the commissioners made you worth that much more?"

"No," replied Burgess, "They just offered it and I accepted."

Burgess, telling of his work in the interests of the scheme for American valuation if imports, said he had called on Senators Smoot (Rep.), of Utah; Watson (Rep.), of Indiana; Hatfield (Rep.), of West Virginia; Goff (Rep.), of West Virginia; Fess (Rep.), of Ohio, and Burton (Rep.), of Ohio.

Burgess said he did not call on Senator Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania.

"Why did you skip him?"

"Because he was a very difficult man to see," said Burgess. "He let it be known he didn't want to be disturbed because he had so many things on his hands."

"What do you call your activities?" asked Caraway.

"I call it looking after the pottery interests."

"You have read President Wilson's terrific indictment of lobbyists?" asked Caraway.

Cracksmen Loot Safe, Get Firm's Payroll

The burglars smashed a window to gain entrance, after which they moved the 400-pound safe from the front office to a refrigerator and knocked off the combination lock. The loot was estimated at from $700 to $1,000.

JURY SELECTED

The entire morning was taken up yesterday selecting a jury to try the case, both Attorney Jackson and Attorney I. Elmer Ecker, for Sloan, using up practically all of their 20 challenges. The afternoon session moved rapidly as the evidence was produced.

Zadach took the stand and told that he worked in the Ruud plant and had told the other three when it would be payday there. He assisted in planning the holdup. Afterwards, he said, Maloney gave him $700, which he hid in the furnace. Someone lighted the fire and the money was partly burned, but the ashes were given to a bank employe who succeeded in having about $200 redeemed at Washington. The defense closed its case last night and the attorneys made their addresses to the jury this morning.

Ex-Kaiser's Sister, Jilted By Mate, Near Poverty

BONN, Germany, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—The tragic last chapter of the romance of the former Kaiser's sister, 63-year-old Princess Victoria, opened today in historic Schaumburg palace with auction of her heritage of heirlooms from nearly a score of kings and queens.

The auction was to raise funds to meet the debts of her youthful husband, Alexander Subkoff, Russian waiter and dancing master, whom she married against the will of her family. They were estranged later only after he had involved her to the extent of about $250,000.

Part of the palace which once was hers has been let to private tenants, while the princess herself, in disfavor with others of her family, has been reduced to four small rooms and a small pension at Mehlem on the Rhine.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—A Havas dispatch from Thionville says that Alexander Subkoff, husband of Princess Victoria and brother-in-law of the former kaiser, has been arrested there and sent back to Luxembourg.

Young Subkoff has been expelled from Belgium, Germany and France. He was ordered to leave France last April and was last reported in Luxembourg.

MacDonald and Ishbel View Wonders of Niagara Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Oct. 15.—(INS.)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald spent his last few hours on American soil here today before crossing into Canada where he will hold important conferences with Dominion officials.

The Prime Minister, his daughter, Ishbel, and the others of their party crossed over to Niagara Falls, Ont., this morning and were to leave there late in the day for Toronto.

The Prime Minister made the last public address of his visit to this country at a dinner given in his honor by the State Reservation Commission at the Niagara Hotel last night.

LEAVES WITH REGRET

In a brief speech, Mr. MacDonald stated that it was only with regret that he was leaving the United States and that he wished he could stay longer in the country which had so well received him on his international mission of good-will.

"I should have liked to stay, but I can't," he said. "I should have liked to see more of you, but I can't.

"I take Niagara and all that has happened in harnessing its ceaseless activity to symbolize, somehow, the work that I have been trying to do in the last few months.

"When I first saw Niagara, more than 30 years ago, the power of the waterfalls and the power of nature appeared certain of defying the ingenuity of man unto eternity. But when I came again I found that the will and the dreams of men had overcome the most potent of nature's powers.

"What are we peacemakers doing? We are subduing, leading, guiding and glorifying the untamed nature of mankind."

Following the dinner, the Prime Minister and his daughter made a night tour of the sights here, saw the falls illuminated and toured various islands. This afternoon they visited points of interest on the Canadian side, with Mr. MacDonald acting as guide for his daughter, as he has been here several times.

TARIFF DEBATE CHECK LOSES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—(INS.)—Hopes of administration leaders for a limitation in debate on the new tariff bill were blasted this afternoon with the announcement by the insurgent group in the Senate that it would not concur in any such proposal.

A combination of Democrats and insurgents in a roll call would defeat such a motion were it offered.

The insurgents, through their spokesman, Senator LaFollette (Rep.), of Wisconsin, expressed satisfaction at the trend taken by discussion of the tariff bill and declared no efforts to impede progress on the measure had been evidenced. They pointed out that tariff debate always is a lengthy matter and nothing could be gained by curtailing legitimate discussion of the provisions of the measure.

Complete reorganization of the tariff commission within 90 days after signature of the tariff bill would be called for under an amendment adopted today by the Senate.

The amendment, adopted without a record vote, was offered by Senator George (Dem.), Georgia, who said it was aimed to prevent continuance in office of any of the six commissioners without submitting their names to the Senate.

'Golfitis' Hurting Trade, Manufacturers Told

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—"Too much golf."

That's one of the few things wrong with business today, in the opinion of George L. Markland, chairman of the Philadelphia Gear Works, and one of the 1,000 delegates attending the annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers at the Roosevelt Hotel.

"Fundamentally business is sound and getting better," said Mr. Markland in an interview this morning, "but too many business men and executives are afflicted with golfitis. Why, they're more serious about golf than about their business.

"This country is not going to produce Andrew Carnegies, Charlie Schwabs, J. Pierpont Morgans, Henry Fords or John Wanamakers on the golf links. No, sir! And take the Carnegies and the Wanamakers out of industry and industry will collapse."

"The country is in the throes of a mad race for pleasure. Golf, the movies, radios, world series, big football games, dancing—everybody thinking of how to have a good time and not enough thinking on how to use their hands and their brains.

The "hysteria" of Americans for a good time is also manifested by working men who are bent on establishing a five-day week, Mr. Markland said.

He also had a word or two for the people who are trying to get rich in the stock market so that they can have more leisure for play.

"Stay out of the market," he advised. "You are being used for suckers. If you must buy stocks, chuck them in the safe and hold them. Don't speculate on margins. That's cream for the stock brokers and these investment houses."

WARD S. BLACKBURN

Husband of Mrs. May Otis Blackburn, this man, 29, has been brought from seclusion by the attorneys for the "Sixth Seal" cult, allegedly headed by Mrs. Blackburn and under investigation following the dissix years. He may be questioned further.

CULT SWINDLE CHARGED

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 15.—(INS.)—Mrs. May Otis Blackburn, leader, and Ruth Wieland Rizzio, interpreter of the "Great Eleven" cult now under police investigation, were to be arraigned today on charges filed by Clifford Dabney, wealthy oil operator.

The two women are charged by Dabney with having defrauded him of $50,000 which was to be used in a cult plan to reveal the earth's hidden treasures of mineral and oil deposits, according to Dabney.

Mrs. Blackburn asserted that she would prove that the money had been used in cult work and had been obtained without misrepresentation.

Meanwhile police who have been investigating the disappearance of several members of the order and alleged illegal burials in three counties, announced the discovery of a witness who said he believes he can lead them to the burial ground of Samuel Rizzio, missing husband of Mrs. Rizzio.

PROSECUTION SCORES IN FALL TRIAL

Teapot Dome Trial Evidence Ruled Admissable; Heflin Attack Branded as Untrue

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The story of former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall's dealings with Harry F. Sinclair—in which $233,500 in Liberty bonds changed hands—was detailed today by the prosecution to the jury that is sitting in the bribery trial of the old plainsman.

Upon the conclusion of this, the government rested its case.

The defense attorneys went to the bench and made a motion for dismissal, which was denied, and the first of Fall's witnesses, Gano Dunn, New York engineer, was called.

OBJECTIONS FAIL

Frank J. Hogan, chief defense attorney, brought yesterday's remarks of Senator Heflin (Dem.), of Alabama, about the case, to the court's attention. Heflin had charged Fall with feigning illness to arouse the jury's sympathy.

PASSES LIE TO HEFLIN

"The statements made on the floor of the Senate are an obvious tissue of lies of the most poisonous character," said Hogan. "Your honor well knows that, for you have have the report of four reputable physicians appointed by yourself. Ordinarily I—nor anyone else—would pay any attention to remarks amanating from this source, but in this case the Senator openly expresses the hope his words would reach the jury, and I ask your honor to interrogate them and find out if any of this speech did come to their attention."

Hogan explained he knew all references to the trial were clipped from the papers given to the "locked-up" jury, but he was apprehensive because the Heflin speech had been carried locally as a separate story in another part of the paper.

Hitz, however, assured him the Heflin blast had been removed, and the jury was brought in.

DAWES SILENT ON PEACE ROLE

The General, a striking figure in a natty blue suit with white pencil striping, had between his teeth "the same old" underslung pipe that he was puffing on many months ago when he sailed to take over the ambassadorship. Its brightness and apparent newness baffled reporters, but Gen. Dawes maintained that the pipe was the same one he was smoking when he sailed, and that he puffed on during his now historic conversations with Premier MacDonald at the latter's home, in Lossiemouth, Scotland.

"An ambassador," said Gen. Dawes when pressed for a statement on the naval disarmament situation, "is simply an agent representing a nation, whose duty it is to transmit official news to the heads of his country.

"I cannot have anything to say concerning the naval negotiations or any other purely official business."

Ambassador Dawes said he intended to go first to Chicago, returning later to spend "a day or two" in Washington conferring with Secretary of State Stimson and President Hoover. He will sail back to England October 30.

Owen D. Young, the financier, and industrialist, was present to welcome both Gen. Dawes and Mme. Curie. Representatives from the Polish and French legations, as well as a group of well-known New York women, also greeted the famous French woman scientist.

In lieu of an interview, Mme. Curie issued the following statement:

"I am happy to come again to the United States. Deeply conscious of my debts to my friends in this country, it is with much regret that realization of my physical condition makes it impossible for me to do all the things my friends have been good enough to arrange for me.

HOMAGE TO EDISON

"It gives me great pleasure to go to Washington to meet President and Mrs. Hoover, and I especially want to attend the third annual dinner of the American Society for the Control of Cancer. I have come also to pay my respects to Thomas Edison on the occasion of the golden jubilee."

The gram of radium will be presented to Mme. Curie by the Academy of Science in Washington. She will devote its use to her native land, Poland, which, in spite of a population of 25,000,000, up to this time has possessed none of the valuable material.

WORKMAN SWIRLED HALF MILE IN BLOOMFIELD SEWER

NICK CULLA RECOVERING AT HOSPITAL

SAVED FROM DEATH IN WATER

Clutches Ladder Leading to Manhole Cover, Signals For Aid by Ruler Wigwag

For a half mile he was swept along by the swift underground currents in a sewer. Weak and gasping, he reached a hand out of the water to grab a ladder.

He pulled himself up the ladder to the manhole cover and pushed a wodden ruler through one of the tiny openings.

A man saw the rule protruding, called friends and tossed off the cover. There, looking up hopefully to the light, was Nick Culla, his clothes heavy with water and slime, the heavy lines of his face crying out to be saved from a watery grave.

RESCUED

They pulled him out and rushed him to St. Francis Hospital. He probably will recover.

Nick, a bricklayer employed by Dunn & Ryan, was laying the brick for a new sewer under the Bloomfield Bridge. At four o'clock yesterday he slipped from the scaffold into the water and was swept along by the fast-moving current.

All was dark under there. And Nick was shot along rapidly to what seemed his death.

SAVED BY LADDER

Nick squeezed the rule through one of the many tiny openings. He wiggled it. The ruler was seen by C. R. Burlett, yard foreman of the Iron City Brewing Company.

MANHOLE IN BREWERY YARD

That manhole cover was in the yard of the Iron City Brewery Company at Thirty-fourth street.

Burlett and others lifted the cover.

There was Nick.

Nick was a relieved bricklayer today. He smiled to Dr. J. H. Wagner's reassuring news that his only injuries were bruises. Recovery probably would be complete and early, only Nick had to guard against pneumonia setting in after the exposure to which he was subject.

Four years in this country, Nick speaks limited English. Of feeling he has much today.

"Thank God," he says, "nothing happened."

And then he completes his description:

"No see no light!"

Nick has a wife and two children in Italy.

WIDE FLORIDA AREA FLOODED

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Drainage ditches overflowing from recent heavy rains caused an enormous lake to converge on lowland sections of Miami, Hialeah and other points in this section of southeast Florida today.

Millions of acres were flooded by the gigantic sheet of water, but the flood was not expected to reach into Miami proper.

Hialeah, in the immediate path of the slowly moving flood, was faced today with the prospect of complete evacuation. With water already standing from a few inches to several feet deep in Hialeah, a suburb of Miami, an increase of six inches more would make living there dangerous, said J .O. Frank, American legion official in charge of relief work.

An emergency fund of $21,000 has been voted by the Miami City commission for cutting a drainage ditch in the southwest section of the city to reduce the high water and allow it to flow more freely into Biscayn Bay. A fund of $1,000 likewise was appropriated by the city council for emergency relief purposes.

G. Carl Adams, engineering head of the Glenn H. Curtiss properties, made an aerial survey of the huge lake and reported that the west dykes of the Miami canal had broken in one place to the north of Hialeah, thereby letting loose a great mass of water.

Canadian Barred By U. S. to Live In Woodshed

MALONE, N. Y., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Arthur Plante, a Canadian, who had resided in the United States for nearly 30 years, is preparing to spend the winter in his woodshed because that part of the residence, just north of Malone, which he purchased recently, is in Canada.

The dwelling, attached to the woodshed is in United States territory and Plante is prevented by United States immigration authorities from again entering this country.

COMPANY SUED OVER INJURY

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Doran, Jr., of Castle Shannon, in behalf of their 5-year-old son, J. Frederick Doran, filed suit against the Pittsburgh Railways Company in Common Pleas Court, asking $20,000 damages for injuries to the boy. The suit alleged that while the lad was sitting on a bumper alongside the tracks of a trestle over the Castle Shannon road, September 28 last, he was struck by a car and suffered a fractured skull and other injuries.

HOOVER'S BOARD SEEKS EXPERTS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—A review of the progress and problems of the gigantic task imposed upon it by President Hoover's nation-wide survey of lawlessness and the conditions which it produce today drew the chief executive's law enforcement commission into session at its headquarters here.

Although the object of the meeting, which is expected to continue for several days, was disclosed in only a general way, there were intimations that before reaching an adjournment, the commission might take action regarding the selection of additional experts to deal with specific phases of crime.

LIQUOR INQUIRY

As yet, it has to engage expert assistance for its inquiry into the delicate subject of prohibition and into five other divisions of its survey as well.

These are juvenile delinquency, lawlessness among enforcement officers, probation, paroles and prisons. Experts have already been selected to gather information on the volume of crime, its causes, police, prosecution, Federal courts and the foreign-born criminal.

In addition to this subject of selecting experts, the commission had at its disposal many letters from governors of the various states which came in response to the requests of Chairman George W. Wickersham for suggestions from the state executives.

PICK EXPERTS

The greatest of care is being exercised in the selection of experts and great difficulty has been encountered in discovering individuals who reached the standard set by the commission and yet were free to accept appointments. Some have been unable to drop work upon which they were already engaged.

All members of the commission except Judge William S. Kenyon were here for the meeting, the largest number that has yet attended a session of the group since regular monthly gatherings became a regular part of the commission's program.

Sheppard Dry Bill Splits All Factions in Congress

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The Sheppard bill to make the buyer of bootleg liquor equally guilty with the seller has split prohibitionists, anti-prohibitionists, the judiciary and the constitutionalists in Congress wide open.

No single question that has arisen in connection with the many-sided prohibition controversy has caused such a wide divergence of opinion among both friends and foes of Volsteadism, a survey disclosed today.

When Congress convenes in regular session in December there will be a battle over it that is going to reveal some strange political bedfellows.

Two Federal district courts have held that the man who buys an illegal drink is equally guilty of a felony with the man who sells it. The Circuit Court of Appeals second district, has held he is not.

Senator Sheppard (Dem.), of Texas, the so-called "father of prohibition," regards his new bill as the logical concluding step in the enforcement of prohibition. Dr. A. J. Barton, a prohibition pillar for many years, deplores the Sheppard bill and doubts its legality or its wisdom.

The drys are split wide open—some, like Sheppard, contending that it is the logical next step, and others, like Barton, fearing that it will cause such a revulsion of feeling and arouse so much opposition as to seriously menace the maintenance of Volsteadism on the statute books. They fear it is so drastic that "the country won't stand for it."

The anti-prohibitionist are split equally wide open—some cynically hoping that the measure will pass because they sincerely believe it would "kill prohibition," and others contending that it would merely extend the "evils of the present system."

The constitutionalists of the Senate merely reflect this patchwork of divergent opinion. Their opinions were sought and obtained by International News Service today and disclosed some unusual differences.

Said Senator William H. Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, a dry among drys:

"Congress naturally cannot go beyond the Constitution, but the Constitution prohibits the sales of liquor and there cannot be a sale without a purchaser. It is a very close question, indeed. Undoubtedly, the Supreme Court will have to pass on it."

"I think it is constitutional," said Senator Thomas J. Walsh (Dem.), of Montana, another outstanding dry. "It would be a means of preventing the sale of liquor which the Constitution forbids.

"After all, Congress is authorized to pass any legislation which is necessary to prevent the sale of alcoholic liquors."

A directly opposite view was taken by Senator King (Dem.), of Utah, annother constitutionalist of the Senate, and also a dry.

Said King: "Congress cannot create crimes. It can only act under the powers granted it by the Constitution. To make the purchase of liquor illegal would undoubtedly create a new crime. I do not believe Congress has that power."

GROCER PLEADS SELF-DEFENSE

"When he raised the hatchet, as it to throw at me, I fired," testified Fred Siebenschue, of Curry Hollow road, Mifflin Township, in his own defense today in his trial for murder in the shooting of Henry Smith, his next-door neighbor.

Siebenschue, exonerated by a coroner's jury, was charged with murder in an information by the dead man's brother, Joseph J. Smith, of East McKeesport.

Siebenschue testified Smith had accused him of being friendly with Smith's wife and had spied on him for two weeks prior to the shooting, which occurred outside Siebenschue's grocery, last February 1.

HOLDS 'BUYER' LAWBREAKER

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—The purchaser of liquor is subject to indictment under the present prohibition laws, Federal Judge Charles I. Dawson told a grand jury which was impaneled in his court here.

The jurors were told not to hesitate to return indictments against buyer. Not a single purchaser of liquor, outside of undercover men, has given assistance in the prosecution of a bootlegger in the western district of Kentucky during the four years he has been on the bench, Judge Dawson asserted. On the other hand "these citizens who talk about 'my' bootlegger" encourage others to violate the law by selling, he said.

PANTAGES TRIAL DEFENSE OPENS

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Presentation of Alexander Pantages' own story of what happened in the little office in which he is alleged to have attacked Eunice Pringle, 17-year-old dancer, will be commenced by the defense today.

Defense counsel did not make public the order in which their witnesses will testify but said at least four days will be required to hear them all. Pantages will take the stand in his own defense, and Attorney W. I. Gilbert, Pantages' chief counsel, intimated that several surprise witnesses would be called.

Echoes of alleged witness tampering in the case were found again when Harold Dolley, Los Angeles private detective, entered a plea of not guilty to a charge of attempting to influence a prosecution witness. His trial was set for November 12.

Dolley is charged with having approached Ivan H. Y. Samsonoff and offering him a sum of money if he would "do everything in his power for Pantages" when he took the stand to testify.

14 EMPLOYERS ARRESTED

Eleven, whose places of business are downtown, were taken before Alderman John P. Kearcher. The three others, North Side men, were taken before Alderman R. E. Schneider. They posted bonds for hearings.

The specific accusation is that the accused failed to take out compensation insurance, as required by a statute which went into effect last April. The offense is a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of from $100 to $500, or imprisonment up to six months.

The accused are for the most part proprietors of small shops, restaurants and poolrooms.

Peter Glick, secretary of labor and industry, has directed the department's agents to conduct a vigorous campaign in Allegheny County for enforcement of the new law.

A number of warrants have been sworn out in addition to those already served.

Mrs. Inman's attorneys will receive $25,000 for fee claims.

The first decree granted in April provided an income of $1,250 a month until December 1, 1932.

The case was heard behind closed doors and the records were sealed last night at the request of Mrs. Inman.

Elephant, Woman Killer, To Pay Death Penalty

BAY CITY, Tex., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Like a human murderer, Black Diamond, nine-ton circus elephant who killed a woman in Corsicana Saturday, faced death by firing squad or by the noose today as he rolled on with the Al G. Barnes circus, chained to the steel floor of the box car which has become his death cell.

Circus men were in doubt whether they would kill the elephant with rifles or choke him to death with a huge chain. In case the latter course is adopted, six of Black Diamond's herd fellows will act as executioners.

Three will be hooked to each end of a chain, as if for a tug of war. In the middle of the chain, however, there will be a loop and Black Diamond's head will be in the loop. When the tug of war starts the elephant's huge neck will be contracted until he strangles to death.

The elephant, ordinarily meek and placid like his mates, apparently went insane Saturday. Unloading at Corsicana, the elephant and his keeper passed Mrs. Eva Donohoe. Something turned the beast into a nine-ton maniac and he brushed the trainer aside and charged the woman, knocking her down. It then picked her up, swung her aloft and crashed her to the ground, almost demolishing an automobile in the process.

Attendants and other elephants in the herd succeeded in getting the crazed beast under control.

BLACK MAILERS PERIL RICH GROUP

Oklahoma Extortion Plot Revealed by Kidnaping Of Man Refusing Part

SHAWNEE, Okla., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—City and county officials and a corps of private watchmen and detectives tightened their lines today against an unknown enemy as revelation that a Shawnee business man had been abducted and threatened with death brought disclosures that five wealthy men of this region have been threatened by a band of extortionists.

First public knowledge of the activities of the extortionists came when Arthur L. Fauble, Shawnee, appeared in Wichita, Kan., Sunday night after being missing since the night previous, and told police he was kidnaped by a band of men to whom he several months before had paid between $3,000 and $4,000.

GANG AID DENIED

Fauble said he was abducted because he refused to aid the gang in intimidating wealthy friends by shooting at their houses from his car. He was thrown into the dry bed of the Arkansas River in Wichita, he said, and fired at as he fled in the darkness.

Police here revealed soon after hearing of Fauble's abduction that a series of threats have been made against the lives of four other wealthy men of Shawnee and a multi-millionaire Negro of Earlsboro. Demands were made for sums ranging from $10,000 to $15,000, according to F. A. Budd, chief of the Shawnee detective squad.

Those threatened were H. T. Doublas, president of the Shawnee National Bank; Frank Buck, president of the Federal National Bank; C. A. Youts, retired millionaire oil land owner; W. F. Varnum, president of the Farm Union Association of Oklahoma, and Forest Anderson, one of the country's wealthiest Negroes.

HOMES GUARDED

Private detectives have guarded the homes of Doublas and Buck, whose banks are the largest in the city, for more than two weeks. Powerful floodlights cover the lawns around their homes.

Evidence that the organization of the gang also is to be used in other criminal activities is seen by police in the fact that threats of theater robberies have been received by T. F. Hornbeck, manager of three theaters, and by L. H. Chatham, manager of two motion picture houses here.

Fauble was able to give little description of the men who abducted him and to whom he paid several thousand dollars last April. All available city and county police officers were ordered into the search for the gang's members.

Ireland's Envoy Inspects District

Industrial developments of Ireland is fast making that country a market for Pittsburgh products, according to Michael MacWhite, minister to Washington, who left here for the capital last night after a three-day tour of the Pittsburgh industrial district. Frost occurred over Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Western New York and over the mountains as far south as Eastern Tennessee and Western North Carolina. The rainfall was limited to a little over the Middle Atlantic coast, and over the West Gulf states. The high pressure area increased in pressure, but diminished in area. It is now centered over West Virginia and Kentucky. The Northwest low is centered over Manitoba, lowest barometer reported is 29.60 inches, at Winnipeg.

PROBE KILLING OF 3 YRS. AGO

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—(INS.)—The Capital's police scandal, already odorous enough to have caused a drastic shakeup, was enlivened still further today by the determination of a Senate committee to go probing into the three-year-old mystery surrounding the death of Detective Sergt. Arthur B. Scrivener.

Scrivener was found dead in a Georgetown alley three years ago, shot through the heart. A pistol lay beside the body. The right hand clutched a torn piece of necktie, indicating that the officer had grappled with his assailant. Scrivener's gun was in its holster, unfired.

Despite the circumstantial evidence pointing to murder, the detective bureau contended it was a case of suicide, and the case was hastily closed on that basis.

Now, Senator Heflin (Dem.), of Alabama, and Blease (Dem.), of South Carolina, aroused by other evidence of police inefficiency, promise to reopen the case and make startling insinuations that the detective was killed by someone in the detective bureau.

"I intend to show who murdered him," said Blease.

"There is reason to believe he was killed by someone in the service," said Heflin.

It has long been rumored that a box of cartridges to fit the gun found beside the body was discovered in the locker of a brother detective.

Scrivener's father, who lives at Winchester, Va., and a brother, who is a detective on the Akron, O., force, are advocating a reopening of the case.

Plants affected and ovens blown out include: Continental No. 1, 325; Crossland, 120; Leith, 285; Calumet, 150; Marguerite, 156; Phillips, 100 and Hostetter, 105.

Two Pickpockets Given Long Terms

WASHINGTON, Pa., Oct. 15.—Fred Shell and William Puff, of Pittsburgh, two of the trio of pickpockets arrested during the Washington County Fair, were sentenced to workhouse terms of from two to four years following pleas of guilty before Judge Erwin Cummins. The men are classed by police as habitual criminals.

Only One Teacher Misses Institute

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Oct. 15.—A new record for attendance at a Greene County teachers' institute was made here when all but one of the 396 public school instructors in the county reported at the opening session of the sixty-third annual institute. The lone absentee was excused on account of illness.

Negro Holdup Men Sent to Workhouse

WASHINGTON, Pa., Oct. 15.—Alonzo Alexander, and Robert Killer, Negroes, from the Bentleyville section, convicted on a charge of highway robbery, were refused a new trial by Judge Erwin Cummins and sentenced to serve from one to two years in the workhouse.

Car's Plunge Into Creek Kills Driver

NEW MARTINSVILLE, O., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Stenser McKimmie, 66, of near here, was killed when his automobile ran off a bridge in a heavy fog and plunged 40 feet to the rocks of Little Fishing Creek. Two passengers in the machine were not badly hurt by the fall.

STRANGLER'S FATE LINKED WITH RUM

Slayer of Pittsburgh Girl May Escape Death on Plea Of Being Intoxicated

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Booze stands between the electric chair and Dexter Dayton, confessed slayer of Marjorie O'Donnell, graduate of Seton Hill Academy, Greensburg, and daughter of John O'Donnell, Pittsburgh and Oil City newspaperman. Dayton probably will go on trial within a week, it was said at the office of the United States attorney today.

If Dayton was sober when he strangled Marjorie to death the government will ask conviction of first degree murder.

If he was drunk the government is permitted to ask, under laws of the District of Columbia, conviction for only second degree murder, lawyers said today.

STRANGLER PENITENT

Dayton claims he was drunk. Police have not yet found evidence he was sober except for a note that he wrote his mother, after the killing and while he claims he was planning suicide.

"What ever punishment the law may give me," he said today, "it cannot approach that of my own thoughts. I am worried about my mother."

Retaining a firm of lawyers who were former Washington newspapermen is proving to have been great strategy. While Washington newspapermen are writing indignant stories over the mysterious strangling of Mrs. Virginia McPherson, they are sobbing daily over the plight of the handsome, repentant mother's boy, Dexter Dayton.

AUTOPSY SECRET

KANNAPOLIS, N. C., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Information gained from an autopsy performed here last night upon the body of Mrs. Virginia Hurley McPherson today was known only by physicians who made the examination and three Department of Justice agents assigned to investigate her death in a Washington apartment.

Whether a four-hour examination revealed anything to support charges of murder brought against the 23-year-old nurse's husband, Robert A. McPherson, in connection with her death, was not disclosed.

Lifted from its grave in Greenlawn Cemetery, China Grove, where it was buried several weeks ago as that of a suicide, the body was brought here and the autopsy performed by Rowan County physicians under direction of Dr. James B. Bullet, professor in the University of North Carolina Medical School.

SENATORS ENTER CASE

Employes of an undertaking establishment where the autopsy was performed revealed that parts of the body were removed for a later chemical analysis. Fingerprints were taken and an examination was made to determine whether she had had an operation a short time prior to her death. The body was reinterred after the examination.

The young woman, a daughter of A. A. Hurley, a former mayor of China Grove, but now a resident of Chester, S. C., was found dead in her Washington apartment several weeks ago with a pajama cord drawn tight about the neck. Police declared she had strangled herself. Upon insistence of Senator Overman, of North Carolina, a friend of her father, the case was reopened and subsequently a coroner's jury declared she had been slain. Her estranged husband was charged with murder and held without bond.

Manufacturer, 52, To Wed Young Nurse

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Frank S. Trumbull, 52, a brother of Gov. John H. Trumbull, and vice president of the Connecticut Electric Manufacturing Company, of this city, a widower, has obtained a marriage license to wed Miss Dorothy M. Boyson, 23, a registered nurse, of this city. The first Mrs. Trumbull died about a year ago. Miss Boyson attended her while she was suffering from a long illness two years ago.

Pennsylvania Lets Oil City Contracts

OIL CITY, Pa., Oct. 15.—Contracts are being let daily for the new Pennsylvania Railroad bridge at Oil City, more of them going to Ferguson and Edmonson Company for construction of piers and abutments.

The job will entail $500,000. Several streets will be changed as new tracks are put down. An addition to the roundhouse is contemplated. Work on piers in the Allegheny river is progressing.

Mayo Condemns "Salesmanship" In Hospitals

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Dr. W. J. Mayo, surgeon and chief of staff of the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., adversely criticized hospitals yesterday in addressing the Twelfth annual hospital standardization conference, which prefaces the clinical Congress of American College of Surgeons.

Dr. Mayo charged the hospitals with too much salesmanship and too little humanity.

Supersalesmanship in management of some hospitals often resulted, he said, in the patient being placed in surroundings which, however they might appeal to his esthetic sense, were above his means.

Homestead Man Heads Ministers

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—The Rev. H. Edgar Shade, of Homestead, last night was elected president of the Baptist Ministers' Union. It was the sixty-third annual meeting of the union and climaxed the first day of the state meeting of the Pennsylvania Baptist general convention, which is being held in the First Baptist Church. The Rev. Ralph L. Mayberry, of Williamsport, and the Rev. R. E. Keighton, of Narberth, were elected vice presidents and the Rev. H. W. Stringer, of Coatesville, was re-elected secretary treasurer.

State Department Seeks Prisoner

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 15.—(INS.)—George Robert Gabor, alleged impersonator of a government official and prominent persons, may be tried in New York, it was revealed today.

This became known when Assistant United States Attorney W. R. Gallagher informed Judge James that the State Department wanted the youthful defendant in New York. The records showed that he was convicted there in February, 1928, of having entered this country by forging a passport in the name of Herman Schwarzenbach, according to Gallagher.

Illegal Hunting, Booze Charged to 4

BUTLER, Pa., Oct. 15.—John Pavolina, his brother, Joe; Florina Chepek and John Galovecky, of Buffalo Township, were released under bond of $1,000 each on charges of operating a liquor still and having in their possession five dogs, three shotguns and two rifles.

Liquor charges were made after a raid by County Detective Frank T. Wigton and two constables, and when feathers of a ring-necked pheasant were found in the yard, additional charges of unlawful hunting and possessing guns were made against the men.

Woman in Buggy Injured by Auto

HOSPITAL DRIVE FORMING

Captains and workers in the $300,000 campaign for a nurses' home for Pittsburgh Hospital will meet tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Rittenhouse Hotel, East Liberty. The drive opens Friday.

The nurses' group, under an exexutive committee of five, has 100 workers enlisted, while at least 50 more have been enlisted through the auxiliary. The staff group is being organized, as are public groups in Homestead, East Liberty, Brushton and other sections.

A meeting of the committee on special gifts, under W. S. McClintock and Thomas E. Doyle, will be held later in the week. Members of this group include the board of trustees of the hospital.

A new five-story structure as a nurses' home and training school is planned, at a cost of $300,000 to replace the one in use for 25 years.

FUGITIVE STILL ELUDES POLICE

County authorities today were still searching for Anedus Andreini, 32, of Vickroy, who escaped from deputy sheriffs at the Court House Friday. Yesterday Sheriff Robert H. Braun was notified by authorities at Emlenton, Venango County that Andreini had been arrested there by state police. It developed that the Emlenton prisoner was not Andreini.

The fugitive had been found guilty of entering a building and was waiting to obtain $5,000 bail when he escaped. A sister's farm near Emlenton is being watched by state police.

RADIO CONTEST RIVALS CLOSE

As the third Warner Brothers-Keps Electrical Supply Company's contest to determine Pittsburgh's favorite screen celebrity draws to a close, it becomes increasingly difficult to forecast the ultimate winner.

Myrna Loy, Dorothy Mackaill, Marian Nixon and Grant Withers seem to grow more popular with the passing of each hour. This quartet is receiving most ballots.

All votes to count for this contest must be polled by tomorrow midnight. Ballots received after this hour will be added to the totals for the fourth and final contest which starts immediately at the conclusion of the current one.

Next week there is an additional prize to spur radio seekers to greater efforts. The grand prize, a Temple combination, will be awarded to the person casting the largest total of votes for any single Warner Brothers, First National or Vitaphone star during the duration of the contest.

This prize of course will rank first. As usual the Temple Highboy and Temple Lowboy will be presented.

There are still many people sending in votes for Brooke Johns and Dick Powell,, masters of ceremonies at the Stanley and Enright. This is an error, as all the advertisements announce the fact that they are acting solely in the capacity of judges. Votes cast for this pair are just so many votes lost as it is impossible to return them to the sender.

OFFICER JAILED, PAY ASKED

Safety Director James M. Clark has asked Council to pay Patrolman James L. Shaw $390.99 for 69 days lost time as a result of shooting to death a prisoner resisting arrest.

Charmer Dee, the victim of the shooting, died April 2 and Shaw was held in jail until June 5, when he was found not guilty in Criminal Court.

Sound Warning Against Radio Thieves

Beware of fake radio inspectors and repairmen if you want to keep your set and cabinet, was the warning issued today.

Police and county detectives are seeking robbers reported to have stolen three sets within the past week. The latest case was reported by Miss Genevieve Hellar, of Allison Park. Introducing himself as a representative of a department store, the impostor reported he wanted to make an inspection.

Suggesting that he would change the model, the man removed the set. He was described as about 38, 5 feet 7 inches tall, weight about 180 pounds and has medium brown hair and blue eyes.

WOMAN FALLS, SUES BOAT CO.

The Pittsburgh Steamboat Company, owner of the greater Pittsburgher, formerly the Homer Smith, were sued for damages today by Mrs. Elfretta Cottrill, of 5247 Second avenue, in Federal Court.

Mrs. Cottrill asserts she fell on the upper deck of the steamer and suffered a dislocated shoulder because of negligence of employes.

The accident occurred in September, 1928, she said, before the Pittsburgh Steamboat Company bought the boat.

Judge F. P. Schoonmaker ordered an attachment on the boat. Its owners are expected to post a bond late today.

County Lets Election Printing Contract

The County Commissioners today awarded a contract for the printing of lists of names and addresses of voters for use of election boards at the November election to John Mellor & Sons at their bid of $4,865. The printing is to be completed by October 25.

CITES EDISON'S AID TO RADIO

Thomas A. Edison's help in developing the radio was discussed yesterday by O. H. Caldwell, former federal radio commissioner, in an address at a joint luncheon of the Engineers' Society of Western Pennsylvania, the Electric League of Pittsburgh and the radio and engineers' councils of the Chamber of Commerce in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

Caldwell said that while Edison's name is seldom linked with the radio, he did much to bring about its development through the discovery of the radio vacuum tube, which not only made radio possible, but which is the basis of numerous other recent inventions.

Yesterday's meeting was held as a preliminary to the "Light's Golden Jubilee" celebration which begins Monday. More than 200 persons attended the gathering, at which A. L. Humphrey presided.

MARIANNE by GLADYS JOHNSON

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

In the little French village of Saint Vallier the call to arms summons all to the great war. The village schoolmaster, Andre, leaves his school and sees Marianne running toward him. They have grown to love each other and now under the stress of war the man avows his love. He folds her in his arms and kisses her, saying "I will come back—you're locked in my heart Marianne."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER II.

ALL things hearty and valiant, all vital things, seemed to have marched away from Saint-Vallier with the men.

What remained in the village were pale shadows of life—withered old Papa Gerard, the town crier—fat Madame la Mott—crippled Gaspard Quivalan—her own invalid aunt—

She moved through a world grown dark with nightmare. There were times when the girl found herself doubting the reality of those sweet last moments with Andre in the green shelter of the willow.

Had it really happened? Had Andre really taken her in his arms—kissed her closed eyes—her throat?

Chill autumn dawns, when she dressed in the bare bedroom tucked under the eaves of the old farmhouse, Marianne would whisper to the girl who looked back at her from the spotted mirror, "He loves you . . . 'Locked in my heart, Marianne' . . . Ah, dear God, keep him safe!"

One afternoon she climbed the hill to the deserted little school house.

No one had taken his place since that tragic first of August when Andre declared the lesson finished and walked out to war.

Marianne's footsteps echoed lonesomely on the wooden floor. Dust on the benches. On the master's desk. Even the sunlight streaming in the dusty windows—the deep golden sunlight of autumn—had taken on a sad tinge.

The girl looked about with tragic violet eyes.

Gone.....Andre was gone, somewhere up there under the drifting smoke of the front, but his bold words still looked down on her from the blackboard, breathing courage,

VIVE LA FRANCE.

She saw a book, fallen open on the floor, as it had dropped from the master's hand.

She picked it up. Smoothed out its crumpled leaves. For a long moment the girl stood regarding it with bent head while the sun fell on her bright hair, gently, as in benediction.

This little book.....how many times had Andre held it.....

She closed her eyes and laid her young warm lips on the page where his hand had rested.

She wrote to him faithfully each week—the sweet awkward letters of a girl who is still half a child. She was bashful about writing words of love, but she chattered brightly all the news of the little town.

"This morning I wrapped auntie up warm and snug and wheeled her chair in the sun. She grows very weak, Andre....."

"Today I made a stew of such a deliciousness! When you come home a great and glorious hero, I will make you such a one. chere....."

Nothing in the gallant little letters to let Andre suspect the truth. That the village was suffering for lack of food and fuel. That the "stew of such a deliciousness" was a watery mess of potatoes and a very small bit of salt pork.

Her tired old heart worn out by excitement and anxiety, old Madame Espard died and Marianne found herself pitifully alone in a war-torn world.

Then, for the first time, was the letter which reached Andre blistered with tears. But it was valiant still.

"How could I wish her back, dear Aunt Elspeth, when she suffered so? Better it is for me that I should bear the sorrow—the aloneness. Now she is safe with God—"

To the frightened girl it had reached the point when only the dead seemed safe.

But Marianne was not to be alone long in the big dreary farmhouse. She wrote to Andre:

"That little rascal Jacques, that one who plays when you try to teach him the Anglais—you remember him, Andre? Oh, it is so sad to state—his papa have been killed in bombardment. He is all alone in the world—like me, so I have taken him here to live—"

Before many weeks there was another waif in the big house. Little Francois, drifting in to Saint-Vallier from the horror of Verdun.

"The poor bebe—" she wrote to Andre. "So hungry and so cold! And the little bare body of him looking out through the rents in his clothes—"

Wrote the girl simply, "By caring for these little friendless ones, I fight for France in my own way."

She fought the war with faith and love. She held back sorrow and famine with her own warm young heart.

Who but Marianne was to take cunning little Sylvestre, whose ill-considered arrival spelled disgraceful death for a pretty peasant girl of Croix?

Hardly more than a child herself, she loved and bullied the four youngsters in the big farmhouse on the outskirts of the village.

There came a tragic day of wind and rain, when the frail old village cure went out there seeking Marianne.

From the window of the kitchen she saw him battling through the gale and flew to meet him, regardless of the rain drenching her yellow head.

"Pere Joseph! what has happened that you come here on such a day——" Then, with a face gone cold as death, "Andre! Is it Andre—you come to tell me he is dead!"

"Hush—hush, child! He is not dead!"

"He is—you are trying to spare me! Andre——!"

"Ah, no! little one, no!" He took the slender shaking figure in his arms and patted her shoulder. "He is alive, but he is taken prisoner."

Marianne lifted her streaming face and looked at him. Between the girl and the old man flashed an unvoiced fear. The prison camps . . . the suffering . . . the disease . . .

Marianne's wet head went up gallantly. With lips that shook she tried to smile. "It will all turn out well . . . he will come back to me. . ."

The storm of war crashed on over the bewildered little town. The once placid streets of Saint-Vallier echoed to the trend of marching feet, English feet, American feet. . .

The little town appeared to crouch, terror-numbed, under its hill, with tight-shut eyes and praying lips. One could only pray and endure. . .

And when it seemed that all calm and gracious things—all serene things had left the earth forever, came a frightening—dazzling glimpse of victory.

The Americans . . . the Americans—their inexhaustible storehouses—had thrown their weight in the balance.

The tide had turned . . . One might dare to hope again . . . A lull in the smoke and the flame... And then, sweet as sleep after fever—the Armistice. . .

With the joyful roll of Papa Gerard's drum . . . with the hysterical tinkle of the hurdy-gurdy, peace came to Saint-Vallier.

No more fighting! No more deathlists pasted up on the cafe wall, turning one's marrow to water . . . It was peace—PEACE! neighbor!

But Saint-Vallier still echoed to the tread of marching armies.

Before her, on the floor, Nanette and baby Sylvestre were busily engaged in forcing their small pet pig Anatole to drink milk out of a baby's bottle.

"Marianne—do you hear—someone singing. Many someones singing!"

Marianne had dropped her sewing, in her lap. She listened, violet eyes gone wide and startled.

Scrambling to her feet Nanette rushed to the window, shrieking to Jacques and Francois who clattered down the stairs at the alarm.

"There are men marching down the highway, Marianne," Jacques called excitedly. "They are not French—they have the funny hats—"

The tramp of feet, the words of the song were clearly distinguishable now to the tense listeners in the farmhouse.

Mademoiselle from Armentierres,
PAR-lee voo. . .
Mademoiselle from Armentierres—
PAR-lee voo. . .
Mademoiselle from Armentieres.
She hasn't been kissed in forty years
Hinky-Dinky PAR-lee. . ."
"Platoon . . . HALT!"

The ringing command cut short the song.

"Marianne! Marianne!" she screamed. "The Americans are marching into our own courtyard, Marianne!"

Oyster Fry

Remove oysters from shells (preferably large oysters) and wipe dry. Spread with mayonnaise, then dip in fine cracker crumbs. Fry lightly in butter until brown, turning to cook both sides equally. The butter or fat used should be very hot, but not smoking, and the oysters fried quickly. Overcooking spoils them.

THE PARTING

There were times when Marianne doubted those sweet, last moments with Andre.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Spirit and Hospitality

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

After a person has been asked to lunch or dinner would it be proper, after one has eaten, to say that the dinner had tasted very good, and thank the hostess for her hospitality when leaving?

M. M. B.

AFTER we have lunched or dined with a friend it is the spirit of the hospitality that we stress as we thank her rather than the food. Under the general term "hospitality," "your kindness," "friendliness," we include the food, and take it for granted that it is good. However, if the party has been an informal one, and if we know our hostess very well, we may add to our expression of the hospitality, "And it was such a good dinner, Mary; you are a wonderful cook, and no one can make such a good chocolate cake as you do!"

The Desert Spoon

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Will you please tell me which is correct? When you serve ice cream or jello in a sherbet glass, should the spoon be placed in the empty glass, after eating the contents, or should it be placed on the dish on which the sherbet glass is placed?

2. When fruit salad is served in a sherbet glass, should it be eaten with a spoon or salad fork?

MRS. B. H.

THE spoon, when we finish eating the ice cream or jello, should be placed on the plate under the sherbet glass.

2. With a spoon.

Table Seating

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please tell me what determines the "head" and the "foot" of the table in a private home?

2—How should father and mother, grown sons and daughters and guests be correctly seated at the table?

2—The mother sits at the head of the table. The father sits at the foot of the table. Often the oldest daughter sits at the right of the father, when there are no guests, and helps him if he does the carving and serving. There are no other rules for the seating of the family table.

Mourning—Matter of Choice

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please tell me if it is necessary and correct for me to be in mourning since my father-in-law passed away?

THANK YOU.

IT IS not at all necessary for you to wear mourning for your father-in-law, unless your husband and your mother-in-law would like to have you show this outward form of mourning. Such mourning depends entirely on circumstances and on your and other people's wishes.

Love's Awakening

A Continuation of Love's Embers

By ADELE GARRISON

New Twist Added to the Mystery.

I COULD not find Noel in any of the rooms downstairs, when after leaving Mary, I looked for him to ask him to go with me to The Larches, as Lillian had wished. At last I made my way to the kitchen, where Katie answered my query concerning the youth with a nonchalant "Sure ting, I know vere he ees. He oudt in orchard mit dot Jeem and Meester Underwood und Meester Graham, feexing dot barbed vire."

I stopped short in my first involuntary step toward the door. The vivid remembrance of Dickey's rudeness to me when he had vented upon me his irritation at being turned out of his room for Prince Georges, was far too strong for me to wish any encounter with him, even one so casual as summoning Noel would entail. In my first anger at him I had felt that I did not care if I never saw him again. That first fierce wrath had died down, of course, but my resentment was still strong enough to keep me away from his vicinity if possible.

"Katie," I said, suddenly wheeling, "will you go out into the orchard for me?"

"Sure ting." She turned from the stove with distinct eagerness, and I knew that she was delighted at the opportunity to get into the exciting arena outside. "But, dis ting burn eef you no vatch eet."

"I'll watch it and stir it faithfully," I promised her, taking the spoon from her hand.

"Vot you vant me do out dere?"

"Oh!" I stammered, conscious that my troubled memories of Dicky's rudeness had momentarily blocked off my coherent thought. "I want you to ask Mr. Noel Veritzen if he will be so good as to come up to the house for a little while. Say that Mrs. Underwood wishes to see him."

I salved my conscience with the thought that it was really Lillian's mandate which I was carrying out in summoning Noel. But it was not my "white lie" that troubled me as Katie, with a "Yah, I tell heem," went eagerly out of the door. It was the consciousness that while Harry and Lillian Underwood are on such comfortable terms that no such request from her would disturb her husband in the least, Dicky's distrust and jealousy of my association with Philip Veritzen so colored his thoughts of me that he would be captious over my summoning of the great producer's son for an interview with me.

But I was bitterly ashamed of my cowardice as soon as Katie had departed. I would have called her back and corrected the message had it not been that such an action would have aroused her curiosity and that of the men outside.

When Noel came into the kitchen, I said simply, "will you come with me?" and when we reached the front veranda, secure from Katie's ears, I explained the errand upon which Lillian wished me to go."

"I want to get away quickly," I said, "without too many people knowing that I have gone until I am back again. Can you?"

He pointed to his runabout, parked on the lawn near the hedge.

"I can take you over in that, and be back before any one knows we are gone," he said, smiling, and I drew a quick breath of relief.

"I'll get my hat and coat and be with you in a minute," I said, and indeed it was little longer than that before I joined him, having dashed up to Lillian's room in the interval, and asked her to answer possible inquiries concerning me as she thought best.

Mrs. Ticer came to the door in answer to my knock. Although her buxom, tightly corseted figure was as trig as ever, and her face apparently reflected the calm efficiency which is always to be found in it, yet she could not control a worried expression in her eyes, which also reflected the fatigue that I knew must be hers at the end of a strenuous day.

"My, but I'm glad to see you," she said, the firm line of her lips relaxing into a smile. "And Mr. Noel, too," nodding past me at her former lodger.

"I've been wondering what I ought to do."

She beckoned us into the living room, robbed now of all the little touches which had made it homelike during Olina's occupancy, and cheerless with the dusky swathings which protected the furniture during the periods when the house was untenanted.

"Listen!" she said, lifting a mandatory finger.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Golf Widows

"I WONDER why men marry at all, these days," remarked Mrs. Divot. "They all seem to dread it so."

HELEN ROWLAND

* * *

"Oh, most of them just skid into it, by accident," replied Mrs. Green, "when the brakes on their imagination or their hearts aren't working. And lots of them marry, from habit or custom, just as they shave their chins, or part their hair on the side, or take up golf.

* * *

"Some men marry in a spirit of bravado, just as they go in for hunting big game, to prove that they are conquerors. Others are driven into marriage, by the desire to 'beat the other fellow to it,' to double-cross a rival, and 'save the girl from throwing herself away' on somebody else.

* * *

"Of course, a few old-fashioned men still marry for the purpose of securing a housekeeper, nurse and general caretaker; because they know that no laundry will take the same interest in their socks, no restaurant will take the same interest in guarding their digestion, and no light-o'-love will take the same interest in saving their money as a wife will.

* * *

"Then, some men marry just in order to get the idea out of their system or to stop their friends from nagging them about it; or to escape from all the women who are pursuing them, by tying themselves to one women. It's often the only graceful exit from a lot of foolish entanglements.

* * *

"And gratitude has inspired many a man to marry his nurse; usually after a long illness, and while he is still too weak to put up a struggle and is still dependent upon the daily nerve-powder and the alcohol rub, and can't even wash his own face.

* * *

"Lots of men marry out of pique; when they are sore and reckless, after some woman has thrown them over or made them so miserable that they want to lay their heads on another woman's shoulder and be 'sympathized' with.

* * *

"And more than one man has waked up, after a big whoopee party, to find himself securely married to somebody, whose first name escapes him, and whose maiden name he has never heard.

* * *

"Then, lots of men are attracted to marriage, these days, by the modern 'fifty-fifty' plan, which looks so simple and easy and promises all the joys and comforts of a sweet home-life, with none of its responsibilities and restrictions.

* * *

"It is becoming more and more popular for men to look around for a successful, self-supporting woman who will help bring home the bacon, and then cook it, herself. Just a jolly little running-mate, who will do most of the heavy pulling, and asks absolutely nothing!

* * *

"And there was still another reason why men marry, that I had in mind. Oh, yes, I remember now! Because they are IN LOVE!"

* * *

"I never thought of THAT!" said Mrs. Divot, "but, there IS a quaint old custom, whereby a man allows himself to be led to the altar, just because he loves a woman and WANTS to marry her!"

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, October 16

A DAY of generally inauspicious conditions may be looked for, according to the predominant auguries. Despite the fact that there may be felt an incentive to action and initiative, yet there are many signs of stubborn obstacles and irritating postponements. Also there is a menace from slander, malice and revenge, inducing a personal state of agitation, moroseness and melancholy. These may react on domestic and friendly relations detrimentally.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year of probable obstacles and delays, conducive to a depressed and discouraged outlook, which may find reaction, unhappily, in the personal relations, unless a decided effort is made to "keep up a front."

It is possible that there may be malicious or vindictive attacks, unless great circumspection be maintained in personal conduct.

A child born on this day may need an education to fit it to overcome possible obstructions and difficulties in its career, and also to rise above personal disappointments and disillusionments.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Don't Fear Teething When Baby Is Well.

TEETHING time is regarded by most mothers as a serious and even dangerous period in a baby's life. When it coincides with hot weather it is a cause for anxiety.

DR. COPELAND

I am sure this expresses the popular view. So firmly fixed is this idea that it is almost foolhardy to express doubt regarding the ancient tradition.

It is interesting to observe the firm hold old-fashioned notions really have on the minds of the public. On other occasions I think I have mentioned what a dear old uncle of mine said about infant health.

We were visiting him when our boy was a nursing baby. Uncle was just short of a 90-year-old at the time, but alert to all his surroundings. Looking the youngster over, he said: "Have you given the baby any pork-rind to chew on? He never will cut his teeth or amount to anything without it!"

Teething and what to do to lessen its evils, are as firmly a part of the average life as going to church or voting right. I have nothing to say about the church or politics, except to express the hope that they have a firmer foundation than the fear of teething.

For fear you may be shocked about it, I shall not venture to make my own declaration for a moment. I quote from a great authority on babies: "The cutting of teeth is not, as a rule, responsible for any of the ailments so commonly attributed to the process, and that redness or irritation of the gums are not really connected with it."

But, after all, there is no doubt that certain digestive disturbances appear to be associated with the cutting of teeth. Anything that causes discomfort or lowered vitality leaves its victims less able to resist infection. Loss of appetite may lead to an upset in the digestive machinery.

I have no doubt that congestion of the gums may prepare the way for infection if unclean things are taken into the mouth. In any event, whether teething does or does not produce important symptoms, the best way to prevent trouble is to maintain the general health of the baby by proper feeding, exposure to sunlight and by giving an abundance of fresh air.

OFFICIAL DENIES TOWN 'BROKE'

Burgess Ernest E. Meier's charges that the Borough of Overbrook was "broke" were denied in a public letter by President of Council John R. Herring yesterday. At a recent Council meeting, when two policemen were hired, Meier charged that Council was on a spending spree and that the officers were not needed.

Councilman Herring's letter in part stated:

"As to the statement that our borough is 'broke' and that our depository has refused further to honor our paper, is utterly without foundation. Never has the credit of our borough been questioned, nor have we yet exhausted our borrowing power."

BLAST KILLING 4 INVESTIGATED

Investigations were being pushed today by officials of the National Tube Company and by attaches of the coroner's office into the cause of the explosion in the McKeesport works of the company yesterday which caused the death of four men and injuries to 19 others. Reports to the coroner stated the explosion occurred when a stream of hot metal overflowed from a ladle and exploded when it came in contact with water in a pit below.

Julius Burtasky, 45, of 2803 Boyd street, McKeesport, was killed instantly in the blast, and Carl Hoffman, 30, and Philip Sandmeyer, 59, both of Greenock, Pa., and John Hando, 19, of 1802 Grandview avenue, McKeesport, died later in McKeesport Hospital. Another man is still in the hospital. Eight others were treated at the hospital and released.

William M. Hogg, assistant to the vice president of the National Tube Company, said last night that officials of the company were seeking to fix the responsibility for the fatal accident.

Many Good Bills Offered On Radio Tonight

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Sun-Telegraph Radio Editor.

IT'S a big night, folks!

Three movie stars—Al Jolson, Bebe Daniels, Ann Pennington—will grace the Purol Band one-hour concert through KDKA at 7:30.

The Utica Jubilee Singers, the most famous of Negro singing organizations, will greet KDKA listeners at 6:30 and again at 7 in a program specially prepared by the Sponsor of Sacred Songs.

Out at Baum and Craig station WMBJ will inaugurate a new studio at 9 o'clock with Mayor Charles H. Kline, Senator James J. Coyne and James M. Clark scheduled as principal speakers. A three-hour program has been arranged by J. M. Luterman and Dr. S. L. Ostrosky, new managers of the station.

Peter Higgins, Pittsburgh tenor, will take part in the RKO Hour to be heard at 10:30 tonight through WCAE. At the same time KDKA will have Buddy Doyle as the featured artist with the Orchestradians. Both should be very good.

Not enough of good things, we have yet the Eskimos, the Dutch Minstrels, Paul Whiteman, the Prophylactic boys, the new Blackstone group, the Golden Arrow Orchestra and other features of high caliber.

We Now Present

Little Jack Little played "Tip Toe Through the Tulips with Me" with such finesse the other morning that we became esthetic and sort of imagined ourselves prancing in Highland Park.

Jack will be at WLW indefinitely. He plays at the ghostly hour of one in the morning.

Ed Doherr, husband of Frances Doherr, manager of WCAE, has returned from New York to inform us that the NBC has acquired a real pipe organ for its very own. In Ed's own words:. "In studio G on the fourteenth floor the huge music box sits in splendor, occupying at least a third of the floor space in the room. A huge section of pipe running from a rear wall identifies the instrument to studio visitors even though it be covered with canvas as it usually is."

And still more information. Radio has its hero-worshipers, according to those who file pictures of broadcast artists for the NBC. A recent checkup on photos of Rudy Vallee and Floyd Gibbons revealed that of the 200 of each filed not long ago none remained. And no one remembered disposing of more than a dozen or two through the regular channels. "It's the girls who work here," the file clerk explained to Ed.

COMING: Dr. Frederick Stock and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra on the WEAF network this Sunday.

"There goes the old ball game," shouted Robert Thompson, Jr., in the WJAS studios yesterday when he heard Hans' bat crack against Malone's too-well aimed pitch in the ninth inning. Before Ted Husing declared the hit a homer, Thompson had visualized a four-sack wallop. The hit came over the microphone as clear as a pistol shot.

TODAY'S TID BIT:

Dumb Dora thinks counterpoise is part of a radio announcer's makeup.

Gangsters Kidnap Pretty Nurse.
Through the clever ruse of two gangster musicians, Dorothy Brent is spirited away to an underworld hiding place in the opening moments of tonight's musical melodrama.
Jimmy Otis and Howley Rawson, reporters on The Clarion, attend the dance at the Broadhurst Hospital. Jimmy recognizes two of the gangsters in the orchestra but is not alarmed by their presence. When the lights go out for a moonlight waltz he is blackjacked and Dorothy is kidnaped.
Otis and Rawson recover their wits and set out in pursuit of the thugs. On a hunch they follow the trail of torn bits of handkerchief and a peculiar tire track. By a streak of luck they discover the house in which Dorothy is imprisoned and a wild quarter of an hour follows: Chase and battle take place through hallways, over roofs and fire-escapes. Shots ring out. The intrepid young reporters fight off their assailants, Dorothy is freed and the thugs make their escape.

The COLONIAL TELLER

MARKET GIVES PROFITS FOR BOND BUYERS

Conditions Suggest Sales of Stock At Present High Prices

ONE CUSTOMER'S STORY

As conditions move through their cycles in the securities market, there are times when it becomes advisable to shift one's investments from one type of security to another. For the investor who is interested in income, the present seems to be the opportune time to dispose of high-priced stocks and to purchase bonds.

At current prices in the market, the majority of high-grade stocks are returning only three-fourths of one per cent to four per cent on their cost, it was pointed out by Harry C. Bell, manager of the Bond Department at The Colonial Trust Co. On the other hand, there are a number of high-grade bonds which, at their present prices, pay from 5 per cent to 6 per cent with absolute safety.

Sells Stocks; Buys Bonds.

This situation is illustrated by a recent example at The Colonial. A customer was holding eleven shares of a high grade industrial stock at 290 a share. The stock paid an annual dividend of $4.00 a share, which made the return only 1.4 per cent on the market price.

At the suggestion of officers of The Colonial, this customer sold the stock and purchased $3,000 6 per cent bonds at a slight discount. The income from these bonds is $180 a year, as against $44 a year which had been received from the stock, a difference of $136 a year.

Equal to 125 Point Rise.

As the bonds purchased were for 10 years, it would be necessary for the stock to advance approximately 12½ points each year, or a total of 125 points over the whole period, to equal the return on the bonds.

This customer has now capitalized the profit made on the stock in the rising market, regardless of the future course of the stock market, and in addition receives an income more than four times as large.

Officers of the Bond Department will be glad to look over your security holdings and advise you whether they should be held or changed in view of present conditions.

THE PURPOSE OF THIS PAGE

This is one of a series of pages dealing with the day-by-day "news" in a bank. This series is published in the belief that there is much more of interest going on in such an institution than most people realize. We believe these events are of public interest because money and finance have taken so large a part in the life of individuals and corporations alike.

THE COLONIAL TRUST CO.

Bank's Out-of-Town Friends Valuable

The Colonial Trust Company is correspondent bank for almost 100 important banks and trust companies in communities throughout Western Pennsylvania as well as financial institutions in other districts.

The very close and friendly connections The Colonial has with all these institutions enables it to be of extra service to Colonial customers. The Colonial can obtain quick and accurate information for its customers through its out-of-town connections. It can provide its customers with introductions in many communities, and it can be of help in many other ways. This is a service which many people never think of using.

New Style Vest-Pocket Dime Banks At The Colonial; Distribution Starts

They Look Like Small Memorandum Booklets.

HELP PEOPLE TO SAVE

A new type of dime banks, smaller and neater looking than any in the past, have just been developed for the savings depositors at The Colonial Trust Company.

They are about the size and general appearance of the vest-pocket memorandum or diary booklets which many men carry in their vest pockets and women carry in their purses. They are just a little over two inches wide, three inches long and less than half an inch in thickness. They have a leather-like composition cover much like a booklet cover, with embossed lettering and metal corner clips.

Many Save Every Dime.

The secret of success in saving money through dime banks is to have the bank close at hand at all times, according to R. D. Wetherell, manager of the Savings Department. Many men and women who are using dime banks make a practice of saving every dime which they receive in change. It is much easier to remember to do this if the dime bank is capable of being carried about on the person at all times. There have been some banks in the past which could be carried about, but this is the first time these small-size banks for both men and women have been produced in such handsome appearance.

These new dime banks are available without cost to all the savings depositors at The Colonial and to any new depositors who open accounts here. They can be obtained right now by applying to the Savings Department.

$60,000 In Dimes Each Year.

The importance of dime banks to the savings depositors at The Colonial is indicated by the fact that more than $60,000 in dimes were deposited at The Colonial during the past year. The money from dime banks can be deposited in any type of savings account.

Many parents use the dime banks as a means of saving money for their children, and for other special purposes.

In addition to the new book bank, The Colonial Trust Company furnishes a number of other types of dime banks, some of which are capable of holding $25 in dimes.

SAVINGS JUMP DESPITE STOCKS

The Colonial Trust Company Shows Substantial Gain.

In the face of one of the most active speculative stock markets in years, and with banks in many parts of the country reporting consequent shrinkage in their savings deposits, The Colonial Trust Company's Savings Department has shown a steady rise in deposits.

The increase in the past year has been more than half a million dollars, according to George A. Young, treasurer of The Colonial.

Mr. Young pointed out that in many banks the savings deposits will decrease during periods of activity in stocks, bonds, or real estate, and will increase during periods when those markets are quiet. At The Colonial, however, the activity in these outside fields does not have so definite an effect upon the savings totals because of the great number of depositors at The Colonial who have committed themselves to the task of depositing certain definite sums of money each week or each month to achieve a certain goal in a specified number of years.

"People who are saving money with a plan in mind are much more steady in their savings habits and much less inclined to be distracted by outside influences," said Mr. Young. "One reason is because it is so much easier to see how fast money increases in a savings bank when you are saving money on a regular schedule than when you are saving in a haphazard manner."

$30.50 A MONTH REACHES $2,000

Steady Systematic Savings Achieve Goal.

The regular deposit of $30.50 each month at The Colonial Trust Company, with interest compounded semi-annually, will amount to $2,027.12 in five years.

Of this sum, $197.12 will be interest which The Colonial will credit to your account.

Dividend at Colonial

The board of directors of The Colonial Trust Company, on September 23, declared a quarterly dividend of $3.00 per share on the capital stock of the company.

Colonial President In Local Aviation Project

Is Member of Pittsburgh Aviation Industries Board.

The opening of the Pittsburgh-Butler airport has attracted wide attention to the activities of the Pittsburgh Aviation Industries Corporation, which was formed only last November by a group of business and financial leaders of Pittsburgh and which has already taken long and constructive steps in the development of many sides of the aviation industry in the Pittsburgh district.

This company is now operating two local air bases, the river airport on the Monongahela in the downtown district and the one near Bakerstown; it has a flying school (realizing that the scarcity of pilots is one of the limiting factors in the development of this industry); it has an aircraft sales agency, an air transport company, and an aerial photographic and surveying company. Its subsidiaries include the Pittsburgh Aviation Management Corporation, the Pittsburgh Air Transport Corporation, the Pittsburgh Aircraft Agency Corporation, the Pittsburgh Aviation Securities Corporation, the Pittsburgh Metal Airplane Company, the Pittsburgh Aerial Survey Corporation.

James C. Chaplin, President of The Colonial Trust Company, is a member of the Board of Directors of the Pittsburgh Aviation Industries Corporation. "With Pittsburgh manufacturing so much of the material which goes into the construction of airplanes, this city should be the great aviation manufacturing center in this country," Mr. Chaplin said. "The splendid airports now being constructed on all sides of this city, the determined efforts to bring airplane manufacturing companies here and the intelligent plans which are being made for the instruction of pilots are all helping to give Pittsburgh its rightful place in this industry."

JAMES C. CHAPLIN.

Cannot Forget to Have Check Books Balanced

There are many reasons why a person who has a checking account should have his or her book balanced at regular intervals, yet it is a duty which can easily be forgotten or put off. Thousands of people allow their books to run on for months without being balanced and without lifting their canceled checks at the bank.

At The Colonial Trust Company, this matter is handled automatically for the depositors, as one part of the bookkeeping routine. Individual ledger sheets are maintained on each account. When checks and deposits have filled up one of these sheets a new one is started, and the old sheets and the checks which appear on it are automatically mailed to the depositor. The number of checks which can be accommodated on one ledger sheet is rather limited and it is but a matter of minutes for the depositor to run through all the canceled checks which are returned to him in this way.

In the case of a business house or an individual depositor who has a great number of checks, the ledger sheets and the canceled checks are mailed at the end of each month. Many individuals leave a standing order that their balances be mailed to them also each month, and this service is given to any depositor who wishes it. When this is done, it is an automatic method of balancing monthly expenditures against monthly income.

EVENTS STAGED BY GIRL SCOUTS

As a part of Girl Scout Week, which is being observed here, Troop 4, of Homestead, under the leadership of Miss Dorothy Diener, held a special "Scouts Own" meeting last night in the woods near Homestead. A large camp fire was lighted and the scouts laws dramatized.

Cramer's Method May Save Snake Bite Victim

CARLISLE, Pa., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Employing methods similar to those used Saturday by Col. Charles William Cramer, nationally-known herpetologist, in a vain effort to save his life from a rattlesnake's bite, Robert Mastins, 17, a student at Gettysburg Academy, was believed to be recovering as the result of his efforts to counteract the venom.

Mastins was struck by the rattler when he reached for a drinking cup at a spring near Laurel, in the heart of the South Mountains, near here. Fellow hikers slashed the wound on the youth's left thumb and sucked out the poison. Mastins was then taken to a physician at Mount Holly Springs, who applied toxin treatment and then had the young man removed to the Gettysburg Hospital.

EJECTED MAN WINS $3,000

For injuries alleged to have been suffered when he was ejected from a street car by a conductor, John Magieri, of Flowers avenue, machinist employed by the Union Railroad, was awarded $3,000 by a jury in Common Pleas Court before Judge George V. Moore. The Pittsburgh Railways Company was defendant.

While a passenger on an East Pittsburgh street car, January 28, 1928, Magieri claimed that as the result of a dispute over the fare the conductor ejected him forcibly at Bessemer station, causing back injuries and a cut near his eye, affecting the sight. Attorney James A. Geltz represented Magieri.

GIRL WINS SUIT AGAINST P. R. R.

A huge ball of frozen coal dirt, falling from a passing freight car and crashing through the window of a passenger train, was the alleged cause of injuries for which Miss Margaret P. McVay, of 5512 Howe street, was awarded $5,000 damages and her father, Michael P. McVey, $500 damages, by a jury in Common Pleas Court. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company was the defendant.

While traveling to Pittsburgh from Sandy Lake November 13, 1926, the ball of dirt fell from a freight car near the Fort Wayne Station and struck her after crashing through the window of their car, Miss McVay claimed. Her legs were injured and a neck injury she suffered resulted in a goitre, she alleged. Attorneys Kivis Wolfe and J. Thomas Hoffman represented her.

KONJOLA PUTS QUICK END TO STUBBORN ILLS

Pittsburgh Man Pays Grateful Tribute to New Medicine—Freed of Stomach Trouble.

Medicines, like men, are known by their deeds. No medicine ever became famous on promises, claims or empty phrases. Konjola, the new and different medicine, has become the most talked-of compound in Pittsburgh because it makes good.

MR. BARNARD SHIELDS

Konjola has won...and kept ...more than a million friends, because it conquers those stubborn cases that have baffled all other medicines and treatments tried. Konjola was not designed to bring mere temporary relief, but to restore new, glorious and lasting health. Is there not a world of hope and cheer in the countless thousands of indorsements from men and women who found, to their everlasting joy, that Konjola was the medicine they always needed; the medicine that brought speedy and thorough relief? Let the Konjola Man, who is at the Dow Drug Store (formerly McCulloch's), Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, Pittsburgh, point the glorious road to health to you. Take your health problems to him and have him tell you the wonderful story of this wonderful medicine. Learn what Konjola has done and how it does it. Hear of cases like that of Mr. Barnard Shields, a resident of Pittsburgh for fifty years and an employee of the National Biscuit Company for thirty-five years. Just a few days ago Mr. Shields, who lives at 146 Ulysses Street, said to the Konjola Man:

"I did not believe—can hardly believe it now—that Konjola could work the wonders it did in my case. The few dollars I spent for this medicine surely proved the best investment I ever made. It is hard for me to describe the miseries I went through with stomach trouble. Food failed to digest and after each meal I bloated dreadfully with gas. During the night I was subject to smothering spells when I gasped for breath. My heart fluttered and palpitated wildly. Often I was afraid the end was at hand. I was so nervous that the least noise made me jump with fright. I was greatly worried about my condition and at a loss to know what to do, as medicine had no effect on me.

"But all that is ended now and it is all because I have taken Konjola. It was what I always needed. I started the treatment upon the recommendation of friends who told of its marvelous powers. I shall never cease thanking those friends, for they made it possible for me to enjoy life again. Konjola did more for me than all the other medicines and treatments I tried put together. My stomach was cleansed and invigorated. All gas bloating, smothering spells and heart attacks have ceased. My nerves are quiet and calm. I eat, sleep and feel like a different person. Do you wonder that I am so enthusiastic about this medicine?"

Konjola works quickly, yet thoroughly. It contains no alcohol, no nerve-deadening drugs, no heart-depressing chemicals. It needs no such hazardous ingredients, for it is all pure, powerful medicine.

The Konjola Man is at the Dow Drug Store (formerly McCulloch's), Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, Pittsburgh, where he is meeting the public daily, introducing and explaining the merits of this new and different medicine. There is a Konjola Man at Dow's Drug Store, 5939 Penn Avenue, East Liberty.

Whoopee Dominates Stage While Screen Features Sound and Talk

By GEORGE SEIBEL

MARDI GRAS in New Orleans and the Carnival of Venice were as mild and tame as a knitting bee in an old ladies' home compared with Texas Guinan's Night Club as revealed in "Broadway Nights," the new Shubert Revue that opened at the Alvin Theater last night. When Texas and her Gang began pelting the audience with snowballs, and the audience began pelting the stage with the spent ammunition, it was no place for Rollo and Elsie. Anyway, Rollo and Elsie wouldn't have understood the show at all. It would have been too esoteric for them. But they would have heard it. Its rumblings reverberated past McKees Rocks to Coraopolis Heights and past Aspinwall to Saxonburg. And its temperature is considerably above the sizzling point.

George Seibel

The chief mystery about "Broadway Nights" is how that much enthusiasm and dynamite could be generated without alcoholic fuel.

But Texas was acquitted by a jury with moral stamina and high-grade intelligence, so we know there was no scofflaw moisture to provide the pep for last night's jamboree. It was the personality of the blonde and statuesque Texas, who worked like a Fordson tractor to put the show across. And it got across.

Started With a Boom

It started with a boom in the lobby, where the girls of the gang met the customers and pinned geraniums, carnations, chrysanthemums, and other posies upon their manly bosoms.

After the customers were seated Texas introduced the various members of her gang. Then for a while everything ran in orthodox revue style until the Night Club scene, when the snowballs began to fly. These papier-mache bullets made the Alvin look like the campus of Spitzbergen University.

In the midst of the battle stood Texas like the boy upon the burning deck. She has enough personality to be generous in advertising Mabel Willebrandt and Aimee McPherson. And she's kind to her ancient foes, singing: "If it wasn't for me those revenue men Would be back at their jobs picking pockets again."

If you enjoy a quiet evening at home, this is not the show for you. Go and read Ralph Waldo Emerson in the twilight.

Gorgeous Pictures

It wasn't all noise—there was plenty of color, too. One under-sea ballet with a diver amid the nereids couched among gorgeous submarine vegetation was especially beautiful. An Arabian Nights number with a huge white elephant, and a bracelet number with an exquisite dance by Joyce Coles were among other revelations of splendor.

The dancing in the production was particularly peppy. Dolores Douglas and Eddy performed some startling adagio acrobatics, while King, King and King tapped and wiggled and whirled marvelously.

As for the comedy, it was so-so. Not very new in spots, and not very refined in spots—but que voulez vous? People don't go to night clubs to find sweetness and light. If you're going to be shocked by a double entendre or blush at a disrobing scene, wait until there's a strawberry festival at Grigsby Station.

If you like your humor broad, if your ear-drums are stout and strong, if you don't care to sprain your cerebellum, and feel like throwing snowballs at the chorus, you'll enjoy Texas Guinan's "Broadway Nights."

FUZZY WUZZYS, SAND AND SOLDIERS IN GRAND FILM

"Four Feathers," a drama of courage, cowardice and soldiering, and laid against a background of desert and jungle, is current on the Grand screen. It is a picture of action and adventure, presented with synchronized sound effects and music. There is no dialogue.

In the amount of sand on display and in some angles of its story, the production resembles "Beau Geste." But the likeness ends there. The desert episodes lack the dramatic intensity of "Beau Geste." And while the jungle sequences may recall "Chang," with their glimpses of wild animal life, they are too brief to allow comparison.

The story of "Four Feathers" chiefly concerns a young English officer who is branded a coward by three fellow officers and by the girl he is engaged to marry. Each of them send him a white feather. But he isn't such a coward after all. Courage slumbering deep within him awakes. Follows a lot of bravery in the African jungle and desert. He makes his three brother officers take back their feathers and the girl comes back to him in the end.

Orderly Accused In Hospital Theft

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Oct. 15.—Police are seeking James Kelley, former orderly at the Jameson Memorial Hospital, who is alleged to have taken between $100 and $200 from Adam Ketler, who was brought to the hospital in a dying condition. Kelley, police say, bought a ticket for New York and left town.

TWILIGHT

Harriet Calloway is part of the dusky atmosphere in the Nixon, where "Blackbirds" is the musical attraction.

STANLEY SCREEN HAS DRAMATIC CAST AND TALK

Brooke Johns puts an atmosphere of rah-rah and whoopee on the Stanley stage this week in his latest revue, "College Days." And on the screen Pauline Frederick, Lowell Sherman, Conway Tearle and William Courtenay display some keen dramatics in the all-talkie, "Evidence." The picture is a melodrama of English society life.

Miss Frederick appears as an aristocratic wife of a prominent attorney, who is found in a compromising position. "Look in my eyes, I'm innocent," she tells her husband. But he looks at the evidence. He divorces her. He takes their small son from her.

Subject of Gossips

The woman finds herself the subject of gossips. But she doesn't do a "Madame X." She knows she is innocent (so does the audience right from the start) and she lives bravely on. Her only thought is for her boy. Incidentally, the theme of mother love is the motivating force of the plot.

The picture is dramatic and the cast is outstanding. Yet, at times, it seems that a lot of unnecessary time is consumed in arriving at its rather obvious end. There is something about it that makes one sure that the silver lining is there, awaiting its entrance cue.

Clever Juvenile

A youngster is much in evidence in the cast. He is a capable little fellow, who makes courageous and rather-grownup speeches.

Johns' stage show displays some local collegiate talent, which augments the Rockettes, the stage band and the featured entertainers. A Tommy Adkins sextet offers pleasing song and dance routine. One of those eccentric steppers also is prominent. Dave Broudy's orchestral presentation, "Three Themes from Aida," pleases.

CHILLS ON MOUNTAIN TOP IN MYSTERY IN PITT

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Mystery on a mountain top! That's what the George Sharp Players handed out in the Pitt last night. And the mystery came in good old-fashioned doses, with such things as comedy, romance and snow as chasers. The occasion was the presentation of "Danger," which proved a pretty good play as mysteries go. It had the usual quantity of chills—maybe more, and they were of two varieties: fear chills and atmospheric chills.

The scene was a hunting lodge. Outside the air was cold. You knew this by the stomping of the players' feet and by the theatrical snow on their shoulders. Inside the air was electric with impending peril. The various characters peered out over the audience, through imaginary windows, and saw the falling snow. (That's what is called "stage sight"). And Mabel Kroman was sure she saw a mysterious man. Then came assurances from the hero, Kenneth Daigneau, that it was only a tree trunk. But, really, both were wrong. It was just some gasping spectator back in about the eleventh row.

Poetry and Science

But you couldn't blame the audience, or any part of it, for gasping—knowing as it did that, while the characters were peering, a crazy scientist was loose in the lodge. And what a nice fellow he was! He quoted poetry and waved a ghastly surgical knife within an eighth of an inch of the heroine's neck.

Aside from Miss Kroman and Mr. Daigneau, the cast included Alice Ann Baker, Pauline MacLean, Allen Moore, Gus Forbes and Robert Fiske. They all did well with their parts.

The play's setting also claimed attention. It was conceived and built right in the theater. And those backstage hammer and saw men did a good job of it.

Dislikes Mountains

A commendable feature about "Danger" was that it didn't overdo the sliding panel and mysterious noise and shadow stuff. Then, too, its terror wasn't so terribly gruesome and its laughs came quite frequently. The chief criticism to it all was the very convenient exits of various players from the scene. Their comings and goings were too obvious as opportunities for the villain and his manipulations. This, of course, is no reflection on the performance of Mr. Sharp's players. The fault belongs to the play's construction.

The theater was crowded last night and the audience was liberal with its applause. It enjoyed the thrills and the chills to the fullest—even during those moments when the action was spilled over the footlights into the aisle of the orchestra. And, as there was no "Dracula" running loose, everybody kept their seats.

"I never want to see a mountain again," said Miss Kroman, in the climaxing moments of the play. But she is going to for at least five more evenings and two matinees.

'DR. MANCHU' OPENS REMODELED ETNA

The Harris Amusement Company last night dedicated the Etna-Harris theater, Etna. Many prominent business people and officials from Pittsburgh and the surrounding boroughs were present. The house has been remodeled in bold modernistic style so that it differs from any neighboring playhouse. The theater is equipped with Western Electric talking picture and sound devices, and the program last evening included the all-talkie, "The Mysterious Dr. Fu Manchu" as the picture. It is a drama that abounds in mysterious atmosphere of the Orient.

ACADEMY BURLESQUE IS 'GINGER GIRLS'

"Ginger Girls," this week's burlesque in the Academy, is a vehicle composed of various comedy skits with interludes of musical and other specialties as well as novelties and dancing, solo and ensemble. The latter calls for numerous appearance of the chorus, costumed brightly. Featured performers are Verne, "the French Doll," and Tommy Lavene, comedian. An oriental dancing specialty is given by Nadja.

ALDINE'S THIRD WEEK FOR FLAGG AND QUIRT

"The Cock-Eyed World" is on its third week in the Aldine. It is proving as good a box office picture as has been seen here in a long time. The production, an all-talkie, is a sequel to "What Price Glory." As in that film, Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen again essay the Flagg-Quirt roles.

RETURNS

GLORIA SWANSON WINS HAPPINESS AFTER MANY SORROWS

As soon as Gloria Swanson, in the role of a debonair stenographer, elopes with the only son of her millionaire boss, we know there is going to be plenty of emotion and damp handkerchiefs all over the Penn. There is a pretty curly-headed baby besides, that romps with Gloria and kneels beside a little bed to say, "Now I lay me down to sleep."

The picture is called "The Trespasser," and it isn't quite clear who is trespassing. There are many things not quite clear, including the motives of the rich lawyer who provides a home for Gloria and her baby after poor Gloria has been unable to pay the milk bill.

Miracles in Chicago

But there is a succession of such miracles. Bertha M. Clay never stood in with Providence like Gloria Swanson does. Millionaires leave her $500,000 in the twinkling of an eye, and she refuses it just like that. Anything may happen in Chicago. Whenever the clock in the tower strikes the hour, fate and fortune give the wheel of chance another twist.

In the end, after Gloria has waded through an ocean of humiliation and sorrow, nobly accepting a job as telephone central in order not to part the man she loves from the woman he has married, that superfluous lady dies and Gloria receives the message over the phone from her child's father. No wonder the telephone company is always advertising for new operators!

But What of That?

Anyway, Gloria wears a lot of beautiful new gowns, even in her destitution. And she looks so beautiful in her grief that we wouldn't have her made happy any sooner for all the millions in Chicago. We know, down in our hearts, that there is a Providence watching over the poor working girls who marry the only sons of their millionaire bosses.

That consciousness doesn't leave us even while Elias Breeskin is giving a lovely rendition of Bizet's "Carmen" music, nor while Dick Leibert is cajoling the organ, nor while Teddy Joyce is landing on "Romance Isle" with the tribe of Jazz. We forgot it only while we laughed at the comicalities of Ed and Tom Hickey, and marveled at the elastic tumbling of Eileen and Marjorie.

All of which happened in the Penn. Take along a supply of dry hankies.

"FLIGHT" SOARS HIGH IN HARRIS AND SHERIDAN

By MILDRED FILLMORE

"Flight," Columbia's drama of airplanes and talk, soars to high entertainment heights on the Harris and Sheridan Square screens this week. It is a vigorous, gripping and clean.

Jack Holt and Ralph Graves, those two fellows who put the heroics and punch into that other Columbia thriller, "Submarine," do a repeat in "Flight." Again they are pals. Again there is the one girl who is loved by both. And again Holt, though he falters and misunderstands at first, goes to the rescue of his friend. Yet, only in the skeleton of certain situations is there any resemblance to the former picture. Here is drama above the clouds. In the other it was drama under the sea.

To the Rescue

Graves appears as a student flier in the Marine Corps and Holt plays his instructor, a sergeant. A great friendship grows between the two. Then enters a girl, in the person of Lila Lee. Misunderstandings arise between the two friends. They come to blows. But a fateful bugle call intervenes. Follows fast zooming planes to the rescue of ground forces in the Nicaraguan jungle. (And my, what grand battle sequences there are!) Nine planes go out. Eight come back. And it is Graves who was in the missing plane. Rescue ships are sent out. But Holt refuses to be a party to the rescue. He pleads fever. But later he relents. And in the end he is the one to save his pal.

The production, an all-talk and sound film, shows clever directorial and camera work. Nothing is overdone. It has just enough of romance, humor and sentiment, no more. As for thrills they come about as fast as the ears and eyes can handle them.

Well Conceived

Though not always so startlingly original as to situations and ways of putting an idea over, everything about "Flight" is well conceived.

In addition to the picture, Victor Graff and Lou Parker, popular master of ceremonies, carry-on on the stages—Graff in the Sheridan Square; Parker in the Harris. With Parker appear Judson Cole, who mixes magic and humor; the Three Vagrants, musicians, and Rose Louise and Her Hollywood Blondes. Assisting entertainers on the Sheridan Square stage include Willard Singley, Ed and Ida Gordon and the Four High Hatters.

TALK BOW

ANN HARDING FILM, POWELL IN ENRIGHT

Preceding Dick Powell's performance on the Enright stage this week, announcement is made from the screen that Mr. Powell is to become master of ceremonies in the Stanley. He will begin his last week in the Enright Friday. Powell has been quite a popular fellow in the East End house.

His current show is "House Party." There is a father and son act—a mixture of fumbling and dancing—that wins acclaim. The show includes some other featured entertainers, also. And, of course, Mr. Powell himself, his stage band, the Enright Rockets and Karl, the drummer, are much in evidence.

Ann Harding and Harry Bannister (Mr. and Mrs. Bannister in private life) head the cast of the talking screen feature in wife and husband roles. The film is titled "Her Private Affair," and it chiefly concerns a married woman of culture and wealth, who forms a reckless friendship with disastrous results. Miss Harding and Mr. Bannister, who were popular as stock players in Pittsburgh, do well on the talking screen.

"Blackbirds," in Nixon, Give Snappy and Varied Revue Type Amusement

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"BLACKBIRDS" flew into the Nixon last night, alighted on the stage just occasionally, frequently enough to rest, twittered some—enough to let the audiences know they had voices—and otherwise disported themselves as a downright lively flock. The reference to alighting on the stage occasionally is not a mere figure of expression—it is a true statement of fact. Much of the show is dancing in which nimble feet touch the boards so rapidly and so lightly that the performers seem to be in the air about half the time.

This Negro revue is a good show, a fact which the audience showed it appreciated by merited applause. It is Speed with a capital S. When it isn't zipping it is zinging. Boy, it's fast! And entertaining no end. Surprising, too, in its comedy and conceits, the excellence of its ensembles and the artistry of a number of talented individual performances of capable specialists, vocal and stepping. And not a "name" in the roster. No Bill Robinson, no Ethel Waters. Perhaps it should be said there were no known names in the cast. By the end of the week names that are there ought to be pretty well known in Pittsburgh. And they deserve to be.

Dusky Gilda Gray

Foremost among them should be that of Harriet Calloway, dancing comedienne and blues singer. Miss Calloway can dance with her feet and her hands—and the rest of her. And she does in "Blackbirds." Advance announcements dubbed her the Black Vesta Tilly. They should have stated that she also is a dusky Gilda Gray—and a few others. As she demonstrated in "Diga, Diga Do" and other numbers.

The principal vocal artist is Hilda Perleno, whose voice has a soft, sweet, crooning quality and is sufficiently flexible to take a high note bravely and steadily. She and Roy White are impressive in the rendition of "I Can't Give You Anything But Love," and the encores of that number give rise to inflections that bring in comedy and dancing, involving Miss Calloway, and grotesque buffoonery by others, making it a most popular feature.

Dancing is so frequent and so speedy that at the end of the performance, even with the aid of a program, it is difficult to identify all of the steppers and attach them to the specialties in which they appear.

Bill Robinson Echo

Mention has been made that there is no Bill Robinson, but the playbill has the Bill Robinson Duo listed. They are John Worthy and Ed Thompson and they do Robinson's tap dance on a double flight of steps in a manner that is a credit to the originator, who staged this particular bit. Freddy Taylor also is an outstanding stepper. Also a couple not on the program, but said to be the Berry brothers.

Interlarded with the swifter moving numbers are comedy skits, including a graveyard scene that is a scream, and rousing choral features introducing the Cecil Mack Choir, whose strongest effort is in the finale of the first part, a travesty on a scene from "Porgy," most striking in the manner of its presentation.

BROADWAY

'Rigoletto' Presented at Syria Mosque

Syria Mosque, housecleaned and redecorated, was filled last night with opera fans to watch the first performance of the Pittsburgh Grand Opera Company. They were surely not disappointed with Verdi's "Rigoletto" as sung by this new organization, for loud applause came just where it has come every time the opera has been sung.

One impression remained throughout the evening, that we were watching the resurrection of the San Carlo Opera Company, and one always had one's money's worth there. Familiar leading singers and helpers, sprinkled through the chorus to steady things, were reassuring from the opening scene, and so, if this is just the beginning, we may hope for a real future for Pittsburgh opera.

Aldo Franchetti conducted with precise rhythms, now and then allowing a hard-breathing soloist a bit of freedom to make a pretty tone or to hold a high C, the joy of Italian opera. The orchestra did little more than play accompaniments; sometimes it was hardly more than amateurish as in the opening of the second act. The chorus is a Pittsburgh product. It lacked tang, and should look to its 20th century haircuts before making another appearance.

Tina Paggi, as "Gilda," was easily the star of the evening. She had high notes to spare, a brilliant staccato, and great ease in her acting. Edward Albano, in the title role, would have made a better impression, if he could free himself from the conductor's stick and play with his partners on the stage alone. Antonio Rossitto, the "Duke," a little like St. Joan's Charles of France, was not very impressive as royalty, but with a little pushing he was able to sing the many tuneful airs which Verdi alloted to him. Francesco Curci was very helpful in managing the new chorus, and Keziah Thomas sang a good "Maddalena." George Wooten and George Toole were local singers with limited duties. Gilbert Carney was miscast as "Sparafucile."

Scenery and costumes were fresh. The ballet, under the direction of Earl Heinrich, had but a short appearance, but were well in the picture. That is a feature for the new singers to learn, to sing in the role and not to an audience who looks for more in acting than an everlasting smile or a raised eyebrow.

It was a surprising first performance, and Pittsburgh can look forward to the next, "Il Trovatore" with some interest.

It is expected that by the end of this year about 4,100 divorce cases will have been heard in London and the assize towns. Last year 3,740 decrees were granted, and in 1927 there were 3,190 decrees handed down.

The modern sculptured bobs do wonders to bring out your personality. But like other present-day modes of arranging the hair, they call attention to it. That's why it's so important nowadays to keep your hair soft, lustrous, abundant. The easiest and quickest way to give new lustre and color to hair, which has begun to look dull and lifeless, is with Danderine. And it makes the hair softer, easier to arrange; holds it in place.

Here's all you do. Each time you use your brush just put a little Danderine on it. It removes the oily film from your hair; brings out its natural color; gives it more gloss than brilliantine. Waves "set" with it stay in longer.

Danderine dissolves the crust of dandruff; puts the scalp in the pink of condition. It stops falling hair. A small bottle is enough to show its merit. Start on it tonight.

PERIL OF PRICE WAR CITED

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—A warning against the danger of mass production and suggestions for education as a means to end destructive price reductions were expressed at the close of the opening session of a three-day meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers.

A. A. Hadden, of Chicago, manager of the western division of the Thompson & Lichtner Company, Inc., technical advisers to the management engineering bureau of the association, declared that while mass production was developed as a means of economic production it now bids fair to overbalance its advantages by placing tremendous pressure on the sales department for sales and still more sales.

Havana Stadium Plans Hit Snag

HAVANA, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Permits recently granted by the Public Works Department to a group of Cuban promoters for erection of a mammoth stadium on the Mangiar De Urrutia lands were suspended pending investigation into concessionary requests. Joseph E. Barlow, American resident of Havana, claims the lands were confiscated by the Cuban government.

Unofficial reports were that the Public Works Department lacked concessionary powers and that the municipal government of Havana alone is empowered to consider the permit.

Evangelical Synod Votes for Merger

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—With almost a unanimous vote, the Evangelical Synod of North America in its twenty-fifth general conference meeting here, approved of the merger of its own church, the Reformed Church in the United States and the United Brethren in Christ.

Nothing to complete the merger remains now but to arrange minor details. This will be the first time in history, churchmen say, that a church having the Episcopacy has merged with other forms of government.

Schools to Dismiss for River Fete

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by HAVEY J. BOYLE

TWO days in the atmosphere of the world series in Philadelphia naturally turns the mind, if any, in the direction of the national pastime. It is difficult to mingle with 20 or 30 baseball writers, and two or three big league players, present and past, without making some comment thereon.

* * *

Ennui coming from an overdose of baseball gripped altogether too many of the writers. Baseball possibly is the same as ever, but the viewpoint of the writers as they grow older—and too familiar—has changed.

* * *

Havey J. Boyle

EVEN cynicism has crept into the thinking of a player or so. There was Max Carey, who used to play here, attending the series—for one day—and smiling just a little bitterly over the fact that after 21 years in baseball—20 years in one league—he hasn't got a job. Luckily, Max saved some money and doesn't need work immediately, but he can't help musing over the strange twists occupation in baseball takes.

* * *

More refreshing was the reminiscing of Buck Herzog, who told of the day when, after Ty Cobb had spiked him, Buck ominously asked Cobb's hotel room number, proceeded thereto, and challenged Cobb, who was his physical superior in all dimensions. Buck admitted he got licked. It is a better story that way. He knew he was going to be liched when he challenged Cobb. No one ever accused Herzog of lacking nerve.

* * *

THERE was Capt. Traynor, who, turning writer, was observing the games with the earnestness of a country fan. Recognized as a great baseball artist—an immortal of the game—Traynor found lots of company as he moved around.

* * *

It was difficult to find any baseball fan in Philadelphia who didn't look upon the Athletics as a team of super-men. They would have gone into a frenzied rage if anyone had observed it was an ordinary ball club and that a player named Hack Wilson on the Chicago team did more to help the Philadelphians, unwittingly, than any member of the super-club. But that is baseball all over and Philadephia is no different from New York, Pittsburgh, or any other city.

CHESTER WALLACE, of the department of drama at Carnegie Institute of Technology, naturally is all a-flutter over the test his boys and girls take tomorrow night when they will act as the supporting cast for a noted actor, R. D. McLean, who will play the title role in "Shylock." It is to be presented in the Carnegie Music Hall.

The drama students at Tech will take this with the same seriousness that the Tech students who play football look on their coming games.

The local school has turned out many successful actors and to come from the local school is a recommendation that has won many a novice in his first tremulous days as a graduate a chance on the professional stage.

BUS MONOPOLY ATTEMPT HERE CHARGED

Stifling of Competition Seen in Move to Buy Out Independent Lines

To stifle competition, the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company today was reported negotiating for the purchase of independent bus lines operating out of Pittsburgh. Such a move would give the Motor Coach Company a monopoly in its 25-cent rate, which civic organizations are opposing.

The subject of rates is to be heard by the Public Service Commission, Wednesday, October 23. This angle of the controversy is likely to be developed at the coming hearing.

Reports were also in circulation that the members of Bellevue council will be summoned by the motor coach company to testify in their behalf. As the Bellevue rate is being attacked and no complaint was made when it was established, it is rumored that the motor coach company regards the councilmanic attitude as favorable to it.

MAY CALL COUNCILMEN

James Simeral, secretary of Bellevue council said today that he had received no notice that members of the town council were to be summoned before the commission.

Attorney W. G. Negley, president of the Oakland Board of Trade has been busy along with other civic organizations preparing data to be submitted to the commission in fighting the 25-cent fare rate generally, which is regarded as a public injustice.

Five and six cents a mile, the protestants say, is out of all reason for the carrying of passengers on public highways. It is pointed out that public utility concerns have always claimed that short haul business has been the most profitable, yet cross country hauls only cost around 2½ cents a mile, with mountain grades to travel over.

RATE HELD TOO HIGH

Opponents of 25-cent fares also expect to go into the question of local service. The manner in which the bus concerns operate in small communities will be pointed out to the commission. The 25-cent fare rate charged in Pittsburgh is regarded as completely out of line with the fares of bus concerns throughout the nation, who are operating at a good profit on a much lower fare basis. The question of zone rates for Pittsburgh also will be gone into.

CHURCH OFFERS VOTING ROOM IN OAKLAND

Edifice at Fifth and Craft Avenues Suggested to County as Polling Place

The parish house of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Fifth and Craft avenues, was offered the county today as a polling place.

It was proposed the voters of the Twenty-first district of the Fourth Ward should vote there instead of at the corrugated iron shack half a block distant, where ballot boxes were seized by armed bandits at the primary election last month.

Politicians opposed the proposal on the ground that the new location would be too far for the voters to walk.

WOMEN FEAR SHACK

Mrs. Florence K. Amos, a member of the executive committee of the League of Women Voters and wife of the rector of St. Peter's church, tendered the use of the parish house, free of charge.

She said that women feared to vote at the present polling place. The parish house, Mrs. Amos pointed out, was clean, well-lighted and heated, spacious and otherwise adequate.

PLAN HEARD

The shack where the citizens of the district must now cast their ballots lacks nearly every desirable quality, it was maintained.

Other women supported Mrs. Amos in her plea, which was presented to the County Commissioners in an informal hearing.

"TOO FAR," OBJECTION

Howard Neely, ward chairman, announced he was against the change. The people would have to walk too far, he declared. The parish house, he explained, was on the edge of the district, and if the voting place were to be moved it would be more nearly to the center of the district.

Philip A. Coyne, brother of Senator "Jimmy" Coyne, also objected to the proposed change on the same grounds as Neely.

The County Commissioners reserved decision.

TWO NEW PLAY SPOTS NAMED

Council has passed Harry A. Little's resolution designating names for two recreation centers on the North Side.

The "George A. Young Playground and Recreation Center" was applied to the site on Complete street, near Shadeland avenue, Twenty-seventh Ward.

The swimming pool in East Park was named the "Sue Murray" pool in honor of the daughter of Robert Murray, Republican, of the Twenty-third Ward and chief clerk of the Board of Viewers.

Robert Garland voted for both names, but had a motion adopted that will require Council to deliberate at least a week before any public property is named in honor of living persons.

"These are prominent citizens," Little averred.

"I know," Garland replied.

North Side Asks For Improvements

Officials of the Twenty-seventh Ward Board of Trade have petitioned Council for a number of improvements in that district. They are repairs to the curbing of California avenue at Benton street, and of McClure avenue at Robert McAfee Bridge; traffic signal lights and street repairs at various locations, installation of a siren at No. 15 Fire Engine House, installation of a service truck at No. 55 Fire Engine House.

Compensation Asked For Injury to Boy

Timothy J. Buckley, of 4632 Carlton street, has submitted to Council a claim for $243 as compensation for injuries to his 10-year-old son James, who broke his arm last August 22 in a fall while at play in Leslie recreation grounds, Forty-sixth and Butler streets.

TINY, TINY SUNFISH

So tiny that many make a handful, those sunfish. Compare them with the fingers.

FISH PLANTED IN PARK LAKES

Carnegie Lake's finny population was greater today by 40,000 tiny sunfish, plus a few polliwogs.

They came from the state fish hatchery at Union City and were put into the Highland Park pond at the request of Pittsburgh chapter, Izaak Walton League.

Only children will be allowed to fish for them.

In preparation for the sunfish the league planted three kinds of potamogeton in the lake. Potamogeton is a water plant that grows submerged. That assures that it will not become entangled in the oars of boaters and the lines of bait casters.

Forty thousand additional sunfish will be planted in the pond in Panther Hollow, Schenley Park, in a few days, and later, Dr. Charles Reitell, of the State Fish Commission, promises yellow perch and catfish will be released in both parks.

The Waltonians who turned the "sunnies" loose in Carnegie Lake were C. W. Ward, president of Pittsburgh chapter; Dr. Arthur W. Henn, secretary; W. B. Kerr, chairman of the outdoor activities committee; J. W. Sherrer and Ralph L. Smith, directors, and J. J. Husson.

HUGE THRONG TO SEE BOAT PAGEANT

Cabinet Members, Governors To Attend Banquet; City Officials Plan Cairo Trip

A brilliant reception awaits five cabinet members, two governors and railroad executives who will arrive in the city Thursday morning to attend the banquet in the William Penn Hotel that night, opening the Ohio River celebration.

Plans were to be discussed at a meeting of the Pittsburgh Celebration Committee in the Chamber of Commerce today. Alexander W. Dann, chairman, is scheduled to preside.

There will be no classes held in the public schools of the city on Friday, the day of the river parade, the Board of Education announced yesterday. With the city school children free, and the suspension of classes in many borough schools contiguous to Pittsburgh, there likely will be a crowd of more than 300,000 at the wharf to watch $2,000,000 worth of floating equipment, bedecked with flags, go steaming down from the Monongahela waterfront to the Emsworth Dam.

PLANS COMPLETED

Capt. William B. Rodgers and Capt. A. C. Ackard yesterday had completed final touches to the river pageant, of which they are in charge.

The main hotel banquet hall has been reserved, and it is likely that several other rooms will be utilized for the banquet. James Francis Burke will be toastmaster, and Secretary of War James W. Good will make the principal address. Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, Pittsburghers, will speak, as will Secretary of Commerce Robert P. Lamont and Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams.

There will be brief remarks from the following railroad executives: Daniel Willard, Baltimore and Ohio; W. W. Atterbury, Pennsylvania; J. J. Burnot, Chesapeake and Ohio; P. E. Crowley, New York Central Lines; Frank Taplin, of the Taplin interests, and Charles Dennay, of the Erie. The two governors, John S. Fisher, Pennsylvania, and William G. Conley, West Virginia, also will speak.

Representing the Army engineers, the men who built the locks and dams and made possible the water stairway from Pittsburgh to the Mississippi, will be Col. Roger G. Powell, Cincinnati district; Maj. E. D. Ardery, Huntingdon; Col. H. B. Ferguson, formerly in charge at Pittsburgh, and Col. Jarvis J. Bain, engineer in charge of the Pittsburgh river territory.

OFFICIALS TO MAKE TRIP

City and county officials have made tentative plans to leave here Saturday morning on the steamer Greater Pittsburgh for Cairo, Ill., in the pageant.

The trip was arranged yesterday at a meeting in the office of Mayor Charles H. Kline, attended by members of Council and these members of the citizens' committee in charge of the celebration: Capt. Rodgers, I. H. Bunton and W. S. Linderman.

County Commissioners Joseph G. Armstrong, Edward V. Babcock and C. C. McGovern have been invited, in addition to guests to be selected by Mayor Kline and members of Council. Each Pittsburgh newspaper and the Associated Press will be represented on the trip.

Members of the Pittsburgh party will attend banquets in Cincinnati and Louisville in honor of President Herbert Hoover.

WORK SPEEDED ON RIVER ROAD

Work on the Ohio River boulevard is ahead of schedule, according to engineers of Booth & Flinn, contractors.

Concrete is being poured for eight of nine bridges which will form part of the highway between the city and Emsworth. By use of heated materials, engineers expect to continue concrete work throughout the winter except during severe cold weather.

Grading and fills are about 20 per cent completed, according to representatives of the company. At the present rate of progress, that portion of the new highway through the North Boroughs will be completed by Christmas of next year, engineers believe, or six months ahead of schedule.

Red Light Beam Causes Fire Scare

Downtown firemen answering a still alarm from the Benedum-Trees Building, Fourth avenue, near Wood street, last night, found what appeared to be a sheet of flame 15 feet high shooting from the roof of the building. Investigation proved it to be a red light, arranged for "Light's Golden Jubilee" reflecting upon steam escaping from a broken pipe on the roof.

Man Held for Court In Theft of Cows

James Kleer, 29, of Wilhelm street, Elliott, was held for court on two charges of larceny by Justice of the Peace A. W. McMillen in Carnegie last night, when he confessed that he had taken two cows from farmers in Collier Township last May. One was sold to Joseph Wojtajsick, of Steuben street, West End, for $65, he said. The latter was absolved from the charge of receiving stolen property when Kleer said the theft was unknown to him. Another cow, stolen at the same time, was not accounted for.

Braddock Council Reinstates Chief

Michael Pipko, suspended as chief of police of Braddock last September by Burgess W. L. Callahan, was ordered reinstated and paid back wages by Braddock Council last night. Pipko refused to acknowledge the suspension and continued working, although the burgess failed to sign his pay checks. Council took the stand that since that body had not been notified of the chief's suspension, it was illegal.

Fuzzy, Zoo-Born Monkey, Pride of Parents

The city fathers may, any day now, officially welcome to the city "Fuzzy," a round, heavy-haired fellow who two weeks ago appeared in Highland Park zoo to the exceeding satisfaction of his parents—Callitrix monkeys from West Africa.

The arrival of "Fuzzy" was announced today as of September 29. Ernest Tretow, superintendent of the zoo, withheld public knowledge of the blessed event until he was certain how the plump little monk would take to his new surroundings.

The proud mamma this morning exhibited for the first time her offspring, lifting him by the tail for the edification of the superintendent. Hitherto she has smuggled the baby behind the tree in her cage, while pap monk, on a limb above, snarled.

"Fuzzy" is the first monkey to be born and live in the zoo. One last year, taken from the cage of the other Callitrix tribe, shook off his newly-attained existence and died. This time, Superintendent Tretow plans to leave the infant with his parents and their tribe in the big cage.

Peculiarly, the cage is opposite the stork's.

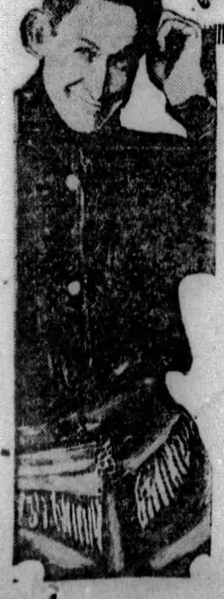
Will Rogers Says



BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Oct. 15.

That was a mighty fine thing of President and Mrs. Hoover going clear to Philadelphia to see that baseball game. Baseball is still and always will be our national game.

It requires more brains, more practice and more real skill than all our others put together. It's the only game when you see it played you know whether the ones playing it are being paid or not.

There was twenty million baseball fans that listened to the World Series that knew every play made, and why, and how it was made, but still don't know whether Harvard is a town or a mouth wash, whether Yale is a yell or a lock, and think all Notre Dames are churches. So viva baseball. It's for us unfortunate ones who have no alumni.

DELAY IN POSTOFFICE BUILDING PLANS INVESTIGATED

3 CIVIL BODIES MOVE TO GET AT CAUSE

Work to Have Started Last March, but Plans Reported Not Yet Ready

Citizens of Pittsburgh through three different activities today began efforts to determine the cause of the delay in the plans for the new postoffice building.

A special committee of the Allegheny County Bar Association, the Chamber of Commerce and the United States Engineers of the local district are seeking information which they hope may lead to resumption of active work on the project.

PLANS ARE READY

Although the plans were declared nearly a year ago to be practically complete and it was promised by the authorities at Washington that ground would be broken last March, the latest reports reaching here indicate that the plans are unfinished and the whole work is tied up indefinitely.

A set of blue prints of floor plans submitted to the United States marshal three weeks ago for suggestions as to the arrangements for the offices of the Federal Court and similar sheets of plans later offered to the United States Engineers, it is just been learned, were drawn in 1925. The fact that four-year-old drawings were sent back here has given the impression that the 1928 plans have been set aside.

STILL IN DARK

"We are still in the dark as to what is being done in Washington," said Frank C. Osborn, chairman of the special Federal Building Committee of the Bar Association. "It is the belief of our committee and of the members of the legal profession generally that the plans for such an important structure should be laid before the people before the work is undertaken. It is necessary to look to the future. If prohibition enforcement is to continue, provision must be made for handling double the number of cases in the Federal Courts. It is obvious that much more room will be required than is at the judiciary's disposal in the present building.

"We have written many letters on the subject and have made a thorough canvass of the situation but have received no definite word from the Treasury Department where the work is tied up."

"We were asked how much space we would require," said Anson B. McGrew, associate engineer of the United States Engineers' office, "and made notations on the plans submitted to us. We understand the blueprints sent here were among those drawn several years ago. We are anxious to know what is being done."

DELAY UNEXPLAINED

The special committee of the Chamber of Commerce, A. E. Braun, chairman, made many suggestions which were incorporated in the 1928 plans. It was expected that the actual work on the $6,000,000 structure at Seventh avenue and Grant street would be taken up immediately.

Inquiries by the Chamber of Commerce as to the cause of the delay elicited no definite reply. In the meantime the 1925 series of blueprints were sent to the various United States officials here and this brought up the question in the Chamber of Commerce as to what happened to the elaborate sketches of 1928. As a result the Bar Association, the Chamber of Commerce and other organizations are co-ordinating their efforts to penetrate behind the scenes at Washington to learn if a complete change of plans is the cause of the delay.

TROOPERS WIN POLICE PISTOL CONTEST

Training School Team Sets Record Score of 900 in Fifth Annual Match

The fifth annual police team revolver match, staged yesterday afternoon in Sewickley Heights Township, was featured by close competition and excellent marksmanship. The Challenge Cup was won by the Pennsylvania State Police Training School, Hershey, Pa., with a score of 900, the highest total achieved by any team since the inauguration of the events in 1925.

The winners were close pressed by Troop D, Butler State Police, which rang up 885 points, and which, in turn, was only four markers better than the Greensburg State Police gunmen. Individual high scoring honors went to Private Rudolph G. Fahlfeder, of Troop D, who recorded 231.

Experts from the State Highway Patrol, Harrisburg, and police departments of the City of Pittsburgh, Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation, Sewickley Heights, and Edgeworth also participated.

Damages Sought For Injured Girl

Margaret Kopp, 18, by her mother, Mrs. Katherine Kopp, filed suit against Morris Fried in Common Pleas Court, seeking to recover $50,000 damages for personal injuries. While a passenger in Fried's automobile, driven by his servant or agent, on August 25 last, the car was recklessly driven over the sidewalk at Forbes and Beeler streets and collided with a stone wall, hurling the girl to the street, the suit alleged. She suffered a fractured spine and other injuries, it is claimed.

BOYS' INJURIES CAUSE SUIT

An automobile, being towed by another, collided with their car and injured their two minor sons, Mr. and Mrs. Angelo Scalo, of McKeesport, alleged in suits filed in Common Pleas Court. The defendants, John P., Anna M. and Robert S. Mooney, of McKeesport, operating the Overland-Mooney Company, are asked to compensate the boys, John and Michael Scalo, $20,000.

The collision occurred July 16 last on Fifth avenue near Riverton street, McKeesport. The suit alleged that the towing car of the company passed them in an opposite direction, but the towed car swung to the left and struck the Scalo car, overturning it. The boys suffered serious injuries on the face, head and back, it was claimed.

RAIDERS MAKE RUM HAUL IN OVERBROOK

100 Quarts Bonded Whisky Seized by Agents; Store, Saloon and Homes Visited

Prohibition agents uncovered an alleged whisky storage place in a raid late last night on a two-story brick dwelling at 405 Overbrook boulevard, they said.

One hundred quarts of bonded whisky, seven quarts of gin and three quarts of rum were reported seized. Nobody was found in the place. Agents today were making an effort to trace the owner.

Hugh McWilliams, 38, of 3523 Frazier street, was released on a $1,000 bond following a raid on his confectionery store at that address, according to the raiders.

Visiting a saloon at 123 Grant avenue, Millvale, the agents confiscated three quarts of moonshine and began a search for the proprietor.

Stills were found in raids on two dwellings, and moonshine in a visit to a third.

Two Men Crash In Stolen Auto

A few hours after two men stole an automobile owned by the Bigelow Service Company, from in front of their station at 618 Webster avenue, late yesterday, they abandoned the car after crashing into another in Fifth avenue, near Soho street. Witnesses told police two men fled from the machine after the accident.

Church at Pasadena Quits Aimee's Fold

PASADENA, Cal., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Members of the Four Square Gospel Church here voted last night to retain the Rev. H. E. Alford and his wife, the Rev. Roxie Alford, as pastors, in face of their recent dismissal by Aimee Semple McPherson, head of Angelus Temple, the mother church. The members voted to draft a new group of by-laws, which they said would sever the Pasadena church from the Angelus Temple organization.

"Clean as a Whistle"

Paper Money Has Value!

AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

An ancient prejudice nursed the ignorant fear and distrust of paper money. AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE inspires the faith which completely accepts the printed obligation. In the interest of convenience and safety, its use is universal.

"toasting did it"—

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

No Throat Irritation—No Cough.

TUNE IN—The Lucky Strike Dance Orchestra, every Saturday night, over a coast-to-coast network of the N. B. C.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

CRASH OCCURS AT EAST END CROSSING

Truck Worker Hurt as Vehicle and Trolley Collide; Youth Hit by Auto

Eight persons were injured late yesterday in accidents between a bus and a street car at Millvale avenue and Baum boulevard, and a street car and a truck at Center and Aiken avenues.

When a bus of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company skidded into the rear of a north-south street car, seven persons, four of them passengers in the trolley, were injured. The front end of the coach was badly damaged.

Passengers on the street car were Mrs. C. J. Doemling, 45, of 261 Alter way; Mrs. M. Brown, 25, of 3427 Penn avenue; Mrs. Lucy Jones, 45, Negro, of 3910 Penn avenue, and Mrs. K. E. Loppin, 30, of Polk street. They were treated at Homeopathic Hospital for cuts and bruises.

C. M. Kamline, 36, of 25 Balsom street, Bellevue, driver of the bus, and two of his passengers, whose names were not learned by police, also were injured. They were treated by a physician.

CREDIT BODY SUPPORTS TAX REVISION

Earned Income Cut Is Indorsed by Creditors; Law Is Held Unjust

Unanimous indorsement of the movement for the downward revision of the Federal tax on earned incomes has been given by the members of the Retail Credit Men's Association of Pittsburgh.

At a meeting of the directors of the association called by Harry E. Wilson, president, action indorsing the proposal for a reduction of the earned income tax was followed by each member of the board signing Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph petitions asking Congress to act promptly in the revision downward of the tax levied against professional men and women, salaried people and all wage earners.

BLACKSTONE IS DIRECTOR

The campaign is obtaining the cooperation of Pittsburgh credit managers and workers in the credit departments of local firms sponsored by the Sun-Telegraph and other Hearst newspapers is directed by Col. Franklin Blackstone, credit manager of Frank & Seder's department store and chairman of the advisory committee of the Credit Bureau, Inc.

"Men and women charged with handling credits in Pittsburgh business houses have good reason to know how irksome and unfair is the tax on the incomes of all those who work for fees or salaries," said Mr. Wilson.

Pittsburgh automobile dealers and their employes have given nearly 100 per cent support to the campaign. The leading automobile distributors and agencies in the district have turned in petitions signed by their executives and salesmen. Petitions bearing 1,000 signatures have been turned in by Pittsburgh printers.

Man Shot in Hand Held by Police

Shot in the left hand, William King, 19, of Newark, N. J., applied for treatment at the South Side Hospital last night and was arrested on a suspicious person charge, police said. King told police that he accidentally wounded himself while showing a revolver to a friend in McKeesport. His alleged refusal to further discuss the affair resulted in his arrest.

BOY DIES, 2 HURT BY AUTOS

Rudolph Lasick, 12, of 336 Crest street, Clairton, died in McKeesport Hospital last night from a fractured skull suffered when he was struck by an automobile near his home Sunday. Police ordered Charles White, of 514 Miller avenue, Clairton, alleged driver, to post bond at the coroner's office today.

Carl McNawish, 45, of Dravosburg, suffered a broken collar bone late yesterday when he was caught between an automobile and an embankment near Bettis Field. He was attempting to prevent the car from skidding off a mud road, when it struck a depression in the roadway and pinned him against the embankment. He was taken to McKeesport Hospital.

Jeremiah Meyers, 62, of 209 East Ohio street, was struck by an automobile while crossing Federal street, near North avenue, late yesterday. At the Allegheny General Hospital it was said he suffered a fractured right leg and cuts on the face.

SQUIRREL HILL ASKS SCHOOL

Residents of Squirrel Hill will hold a mass meeting tonight to discuss the project for a new school in that district. A special committee appointed by the Squirrel Hill Board of Trade and consisting of George M. Dowler, Thomas O. Hasley, Sol S. Goldstein and David G. Morgan, arranged for the caucus.

Proponents of the new school aver that the Colfax and Wightman schools are inadequate as many new homes recently have been constructed in that neighborhood. Traffic hazards also are cited as a reason for the new structure.

Action taken at the meeting will be forwarded to the Board of Education.

Council Requested To Aid Convention

Members of Allegheny County Council, Ladies' Auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars, have submitted to Council a petition for an appropriation toward the expenses of their state conference here in December.

BALLOT PLACE DISPUTED

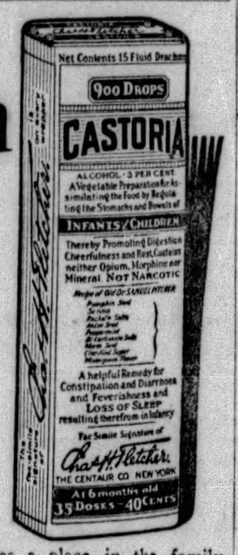
An application filed in Common Pleas Court asked that the nominating petition of W. E. Steffy as councilman in Duquesne be set aside, on the ground that it was illegally filed. The application was filed by five Duquesne electors, R. B. Dell, Thomas J. Flynn, Andrew Moffat, Charles C. Dorman and Charles Stauffer. It stated they had preempted the name "Citizens Party" for Duquesne, with these candidates: Mayor James S. Crawford for re-election; E. C. Kaston for controller and Edward H. Fey and J. M. Lenhart for Council.

Steffy filed a nominating petition with the County Commissioners as a candidate for Council on the "Citizens Party" ticket, but he is not a member of the party and did not pre-empt the name, the application recited.

Film Director to Be W. C. T. U. Speaker

The Wilkinsburg branch of the W. C. T. U. will meet tomorrow afternoon in the First Presbyterian Church, Mrs. H. P. Meede presiding. The speaker will be Mrs. W. M. Mann, Allegheny County director of "Moving Pictures."

Children Cry for it



Children hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and harmless as the recipe reads. (The wrapper tells you just what Castoria contains.)

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, use it to keep the system from clogging. Your doctor will tell you Castoria deserves a place in the family medicine cabinet until your child is grown. He knows it is safe for the tiniest baby; effective for a boy in his teens. With this special children's remedy handy, you need never risk giving a boy or girl medicine meant for grown-ups.

MRS. JOHN WATSON HARMEIER

The former Miss Anna Boggs Kerr, daughter of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Thomson Kerr, married yesterday afternoon in the Shadyside Presbyterian Church.

Federation Meet Opens At Erie

ERIE, Pa., Oct. 15.

REORGANIZATION of clubs as necessary to meet the needs of today, was advocated by Mrs. John A. Frick, president of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, who formally opened the thirty-fourth annual convention this morning in the Masonic Temple. Six hundred delegates and visitors were in attendance.

Mrs. Frick said in part:

"The permanence of society is in the keeping of woman; her rectitude safeguards the state. So long as she is the vestal of society we have no need to fear for its future. The womanhood of the nation is the rock on which it either builds or splits.

"Let us see to it that our clubs answer the need of today. Reorganize them if necesary, so that they give to their membership the courage and insight necessary to meet life and to gain from the new leisure time to think, to love and to pray, and to leave the world better than they found it.

"On what shall the federation concentrate this year? The most important issue before the world today is the peace of the world. It is important enough for the Prime Minister of England to cross the Atlantic Ocean to discuss it with the President of the United States. The general and state federations long ago indorsed the world court as an instrument for peace. The Root protocol is to come before the United State Senate for ratification. Let the women of the country stand by that as they did by the multilateral treaty. Then again will they make history.

"In the state, let us continue to create public opinion for the County library until every county in the state has given this educational advantage to its citizens."

Preceding Mrs. Frick's address, the invocation was given by the Rev. E. MacClay Gearhart and the welcome addresses by Mrs. James B. Luther, president of the Northwestern district, and Mrs. James A. Evans, president of the Woman's Club of Erie.

Presidents of the various clubs, county chairmen and members of the state executive board attended the president's council dinner last night in the Masonic temple, following which a reception was held in the Lawrence Hotel for the delegates and visiting club women.

INVITATIONS have been sent out to 300 Girl Scout leaders for the formal opening of the Girl Scout house in North Park next Sunday afternoon, which will come as a fitting climax for the local celebration of Girl Scout Week. The use of the five-room house and its adjoining buildings have been given the county scouts by the County Commissioners and will be used as a summer camp, week-end house, hike destination or for any other scout purpose that the girls choose.

Two of the five rooms have been equipped as sleeping quarters and, with the use of "double-deckers," will accommodate 12 girls. While only the most rudimentary furnishings have been installed, there is hope that the various troops, becoming interested in what is, in a sense, their very own home, will contribute towards more elaborate furnishing as time goes on. During the receiving hours, from 3 until 6 o'clock Sunday afternoon, Mrs. Edward Vose Babcock, chairman of the camp committee, will serve tea, assisted by the members of the council and the staff.

Cinderella Ball on Nov. 27

EVERY day of this week is more bridal than the one preceding it, I do believe. But we don't become at all wearied by so many weddings, because they are such interesting ones, and because for variety we have plans for all sorts of events for the coming weeks.

Before I tell you about the wedding yesterday afternoon of Anna Boggs Kerr, daughter of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Thompson Kerr, and Dr. John Watson Hermeier, son of the Charles A. Harmeiers, I want to talk about a wedding which took place this morning, about a benefit, and about the Cinderella Ball.

* * *

THIS year the annual Cinderella Ball will be given on Wednesday evening in the University Club, and the date, I almost forgot to mention, is November 27. Mrs. Donald Scott Rogers is chairman, and Marjorie S. Kimball, chairman of the fashion show held in connection with the ball. Buds of the season will act as models.

Mrs. J. Porter Gillespie is chairman of tickets, with Mrs. Stanley N. Brown assisting.

NEWS has come speeding to me that Nancy Lea Paull, charming daughter of the George Paulls, of Stanton avenue, became the bride of Robert Baldwin Nations, son of the William H. Nations, of Muncie, Ind., this morning at 11 o'clock. And the ceremony took place in the Little Church Around the Corner, New York, with only the immediate families there.

This evening the young Nations will sail for romantic Italy for their honeymoon. They'll be back home in Pittsburgh after November 20, I hear.

* * *

AND in between such a galaxy of weddings, society women are finding time to plan for the annual benefit bridge for the Eye and Ear Hospital, which they'll hold on Monday afternoon, November 4, in the Hotel Schenley. And Miss Alice Gray is the chairman; Mrs. Edward B. Scull, vice chairman, and Mrs. William R. Scott, the treasurer.

Making plans for the event are Mrs. John McC. Wilson and Mrs. W. W. Blair. In charge of decorations will be Mrs. Wallace H. Rowe and Mrs. Robert J. McKay; of tables and cards, Mrs. E. N. Ohl, Mrs. Russell Huggins and Mrs. W. B. Rodgers.

Helping to receive the guests will be such well known women as Mrs. William R. Scott, Mrs. A. W. McEldowney, Mrs. C. A. Lott and Mrs. F. A. Dilworth.

Of course there'll be a number of the members of the younger set acting as aides. And directing them will be Mrs. John F. Walton and Mrs. George A. Kelly III.

CIBOTIUM FERNS, bamboos, and urns of golden and bronze chrysanthemums decorated the Shadyside Presbyterian Church yesterday afternoon for the marriage of Anna Boggs Kerr. And Anna's father, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Alexander S. Kerr, of Toronto, Canada, officiated.

The bride wore an ivory satin gown, in princess style, with long sleeves, a V-neck line, and a full court train, lined with shell-pink chiffon. Her veil was of tulle and old rose point lace with a cap of the lace and orange blossoms used as a headdress. She carried white roses, orchids and lilies of the valley. The two matrons of honor, Mrs. John Haynes Follansbee and Mrs. Edmond E. Hunt, who is from Memphis, Tenn., wore emerald green chiffon, and large velvet hats of the same shade, and carried chrysanthemums in autumn colors.

Jane Harmeier, sister of the bridegroom; Dorothy Kerr, of Toronto; Dorothy Barber, of North Adams, Mass., and Katherine Stone, of Chicago, the bridesmaids, wore similar gowns of burnt orange chiffon with hats of velvet to match, and carried chrysanthemums in gold and bronze shades.

The mother of the bride wore brown and gold velvet with a hat to match, and the mother of the bridegroom, fuschia velvet and a soliel hat.

Serving as his brother's best man was Charles Harmeier, and as ushers Dr. Robert Garvin, Dr. John Day Garvin, Dr. Samuel Mercer, John Haynes Follansbee, George W. Aufdeerheide, Charles A. Witt, Arthur F. Volmrich, Hugh Thomson Kerr, Jr., Edmond E. Hunt, of Memphis, Tenn., and Dr. William J. Kerr, of Toronto.

A reception in the University Club for members of the families, friends and officers of the Shadyside church and their families followed. Later Dr. and Mrs. Harmeier left for a western trip, after which they'll be at home in Rochester, Minn.

The bride wore a gown of white satin, with a veil of tulle, and carried a bouquet of lilies. Mrs. Earl Kelley, the matron of honor, wore velvet and tulle in canary yellow, fashioned with basque waist and bouffant skirt, and carried tea roses and chrysanthemums. Mrs. George Reiling, as bridesmaid, wore a velvet and tulle gown, fashioned similar to that of Mrs. Kelley, in coral shade. She also carried tea roses and chrysanthemums. George Reiling served as best man.

A wedding breakfast in Webster Hall followed the ceremony, and later Mr. and Mrs. Walker left for Kansas City. They will reside in Huntington, W. Va., when they return.

CAUTION SHOULD BE EXERCISED BEFORE CHOOSING TYPE OF HAT

Sketched in Paris

TO illustrate our remarks, we cannot do better than to show types of the hats under discussion. The first is from Agnes, and is, obviously, designed for a very youthful type. But unfortunately, we have seen hats of a similar type worn by women who mistake stimulated youth for the real article. It is for the gay young thing" that Agnes is making such delightful little hats of silk and wool, both knitted and crocheted. The model illustrated is of heavy navy blue silk crochet, the cap fitting closely to the head, and the flexible part in crocheted lace, turning back from the face at the sides. The lace brim grows deeper toward the back, and lies flat on the neck. With it, is shown a black antelope purse from Worth. The clasp at the top is amusingly complicated. It is of transparent amber with a little round peg, attached by a gold chain, which is passed through the cylindrical pieces at the top as they come together on closing the purse. Beneath the flap, is another section holding the vanity articles, and the flap buttons down over this, by means of two rather large amber clasps.

TO return to the well-absorbing topic of hats. The draped velvet hat from Marthe Regnier is an eloquent example of how flattering and becoming a draped hat can be, and yet be essentially of the current mode. It turns softly back from the face, and is pulled out in a smartly accentuated line at one side. Like the majority of brimmed hats for winter, this model is long at the sides and back. It is an ideal hat for the young matron.

THE muff of broadtail is one of the combined muff and purse models, of which we have made previous mention in special cables, and so are glad to be able to forward the first sketches of one that comes from Jean Patou. The purse is hidden in the triangular piece at the center and opens by means of a long silken cord with a heavy tassel.

Combined Purse And Muff Featured

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Oct. 14.—Do not lose your head amongst the hats! After studying the current output of hats, and watching many of them being selected, one can only hope that care will be exercised before choosing some of the models that look so bewitching on the mannequin, and in the illustrations. For off-the-face hats demand a youthful contour, good features and a good complexion, which are attributes that a hat should convey or suggest, rather than demand. It is only a decidedly attractive and youthful type that can successfully wear a hat that throws the whole face into sharp relief, with the additional handicap of revealing a forehead that should be free from the slightest trace of a line or frown. And so, it is better to be honest with oneself, and, if necessary, select a hat with a slight and softening brim, of which there are some delightful examples this season.

A'S FIGHTING SPIRIT UPSETS DOPE

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—Perhaps the biggest dope upset in the world series, upon which the curtain fell here yesterday, with George Haas, Bing Miller and Rube Walberg as the heroes was contained not in the fact that the Athletics won out by such lopsided count as four games to one after the Cubs had been figured in advance as possessing the winning edge, not in the fact that the Macks achieved their triumph without once starting either of the crack left-handers who had been picked to dominate the whole show, and not in the fact that so many derby records were smashed, but in the sensational manner in which the Mackmen spiked the advance reports that they lacked the fighting spirit of real champions and would weaken under pressure.

George Haas

While no one openly charged that the A's were short on gameness or courage, it was said before the series that they were good only so long as they were winning. "If a pinch comes and the other fellows get the upper hand, the Macks will not be found equal to the task of making a successful uphill fight," was the tip that went the rounds.

NEVER did a club upset its critics as the White Elephants did in the last two games, their capture of which concluded the series and gave baseball's highest honors to the American League for the third year in succession, with a record of having lost only one game to the National League out of a total of 13 played during that period.

The first big overthrow came on Saturday. It may be argued against the Cubs that no really good ball club would ever blow an eight-run lead with only three innings to go, but at the same time it took players with the hearts of lions to face those seemingly hopeless odds and turn defeat into victory by piling up the record-breaking totals of 10 runs and 10 hits in a single inning.

AND yesterday's triumph surpassed even that of Saturday as an exhibition of gameness and bulldog determination. Though not of the same proportions as the 10-run rally, that remarkable ninth-inning finish was even more convincing of the American Leaguers' courage.

Practically everybody in the park, except the Blond Pachyderms themselves, counted the game as good as over with one Mackman down in the ninth, the Cubs leading by two runs, the bases empty and Pat Malone pitching such brilliant ball that only two hits had been made off him. Pulling the game out of the fire under such conditions by scoring three runs on Bishop's single, Haas' homer, and doubles by Simmons and Miller, stamped the A's not the faint-hearted crew that they had been reported to be, but as one of the greatest teams that ever stood on spikes.

Bing Miller

BING MILLER, who would have been a Pirate back in 1921 if Commissioner Landis had not awarded him to Washington in a dispute over his purchase from Little Rock, spoiled what looked like good strategy on the part of Joe McCarthy when he cracked out the double that drove in the winning run and ended the series. With Simmons on second carrying the winning run, two out and first base empty, it seemed the logical thing to do when the dangerous Foxx was purposely given a base on balls.

IN THE first four games, Foxx had batted .411 to Miller's .333, and had knocked in five runs to Miller's three. Besides, a walk meant a chance for a force play at third or second in addition to the possibility of a play on the batter.

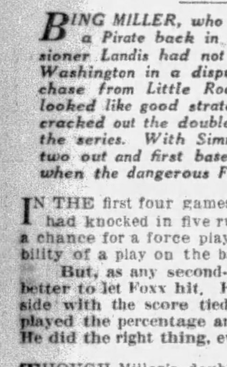
But, as any second-guesser can see it now, it might have been better to let Foxx hit. He might have been an easy out, retiring the side with the score tied. But McCarthy had only one guess. He played the percentage and lost. Joe was simply the victim of fate. He did the right thing, even though it failed.

THOUGH Miller's double put the winning run across, the real batting hero of the game that decided the series was a former Pirate in the person of George Haas. The Philadelphia center fielder was a Buccaneer in 1925, but did not get a chance to appear in the world series against Washington that year.

Yesterday, George got his opportunity, and won a place among Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Frank Baker, Jimmy Foxx, Al Simmons and the other home-run heroes of the post-season battles. It was his four-base smash over the right-field wall, with Bishop on the paths, a terrific line drive that was a legitimate home run in every respect, that really saved the A's from defeat.

A SINGLE hitch changed the result of the game and possibly the outcome of the series, as it was Malone's first delivery that Haas walloped out of the lot. It was a fast ball, "letter high," as the players term a pitch across a batter's chest. Malone appeared to hold Catcher Zack Taylor at fault for the miscue made in giving Haas a ball so much to his iking, as the Cub pitcher engaged in a spirited battle of words with his battery mate immediately afterward. It was a fatal mistake on the part of whoever was responsible. Haas has made only four hits in the series, had struck out in his preceding time at bat, and was batting only .200 up to the time he walked to the plate and saved the game.

THAT homer was worth more than $50,000, as it killed the last chance the Bruins had to win the series and the sum mentioned represented the difference between the shares of the winning and losing clubs. The punch, with the winning run that followed, assured each individual member of the A's $5,093 instead of only $4,000, the share of each losing player.



Pat Malone

It was a tough blow for Malone, after he had pitched perhaps his greatest game of the whole season. Not since Fred Snodgrass, of the Giants, muffed a fly in the deciding game of the world series with the Red Sox on October 16, 1912, and caused Christy Mathewson to lose a game and a series that otherwise would have been won, has any pitcher come so close to victory, only to see it turned into defeat. Malone had allowed only two hits in the first eight innings, and was as steady as the well-known clock until Haas upset the works.

PINCH-HITTERS failed in the series to a greater extent than ever before in the post-season stakes. Never before did the pitchers make such a complete clean-up against emergency batsmen. When Walter French fanned in the ninth yesterday, it marked the eleventh failure of pinch-hitters in as many times at bat.

Not only did the substitute batsmen fail on every occasion to come through with a hit, but they struck out no fewer than eight times. The only men to hit the ball at all were Heathcote and Burns, who popped up easy flies, and Blair, who forced Grimm at second on a grounder. Hartnett struck out three times, and Summa, Burns, Wilson, Gonzales and French fanned three times each.

THOUGH there was much talk before the series to the effect that the pitching would decide the argument, as things turned out the hurlers did not make good the predictions. On the contrary, the batters took the play away from the moundsmen and it was the sluggers, rather than the flingers, who were in the limelight at the finish. Ehmke stood out in the first game and Bush in the fourth, but otherwise the hitters eclipsed the chuckers. Only two hurlers on each side went the route during the series,

JOE M'CARTHY, BRUINS ARE DOWNCAST

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Somewhere in Philadelphia, surrounded by a worshiping family, is a gray, worn old man. His nerves are all but shattered, his heart is trying to pound through his ribs, but the spirit of perfect contentment at last has come to him—Connie Mack.

There are bruises on his back from the gleeful smashes of his ball players and his ribs are sore from hugging. In his ears still ring the shrieks, roars, groans of 30,000 thrill-crazy baseball fans. He'll be all right after a little rest, though, for he's gained his life's ambition, another world champion crew of Athletics, after 16 years of struggle and disappointment.

Down the runway to the dressing room he charged yesterday as Bing Miller smashed the double to centerfield that beat the Cubs for the fourth time in the world series. Behind him raced his herd of White Elephants, screaming, clambering all over each other in their excitement. Yet, despite his 67 years, there was none friskier than the veteran pilot of the A's.

HAAS IS HERO

He threw his arms about Mule Haas, the sun browned centerfielder who tied the score with a homer in the ninth and Mule, already as pleased with himself as a man can be, tried not to break down entirely in his biggest moment. He struggled to get his arms on Bing Miller as the players swept him into the dressing room.

Through the closed doors came a riot of noise, then a moment's silence, and Connie popped out again and ran frantically down the corridor to his office, while it seemed as though every happy fan in Philadelphia tried to reach him with congratulations. Connie lost his hat, and what little breath he had left, on the way.

Once in his own sanctum, all the strain, worry and happiness over the result overcame the aged pilot. He stumbled to his couch, lay motionless for several minutes, hands over his eyes, and finally took a long drink of water.

"I guess I overdid it," he said as he pulled himself together. "It was almost too wonderful.

"Mine is the gamest team in baseball. All season long they have been winning games like the last two for me with desperate rallies and I turned mental traitor to them.

"Mentally, I was on the train to Chicago, wondering who I'd pitch Wednesday when Haas hit that high fast ball over the fence and tied the score. Almost before I could 'get back' in the ball park, Simmons hit one, then Miller and the game was over.

LAUDS CLUB

"I had a feeling all along that I shouldn't give up, and now I know that if it hadn't been Haas and Simmons and Miller, it would have been someone else. All year they've done that nine out of 10 times when we needed a game. I have a remarkable ball club.

"You've been wondering all along why Lefty Grove hasn't started a game. Now I can tell you that he hasn't been feeling well. Nothing serious, but not well enough to pitch and last nine innings. His pitching fingers have been sore, too.

"I started Ehmke because he was anxious to pitch. Any time Howard says he's anxious to pitch, I'm anxious to have him pitch. When he smiles at me and says he'd like to work, I'll let him do it, and he won't fail me often.

"The Cubs have a great ball club and I can easily see how they won the National League pennant. They have a fine staff of pitchers, a great infield, a superb outfield, and exceptional catching. We won because we outlucked the Cubs as well as outplayed them. They were anything but disgraced."

CUBS ANGRY

The Cubs weren't that, but they were as angry a gang of ball players as ever walked off a diamond. They were speechless at the luck of the game that turned Pat Malone's masterful eight-inning pitching exhibition into defeat. Manager Joe McCarthy could only smile wryly and mutter incoherently about "breaks."

Later Joe pulled himself together and went in to congratulate Connie, while the A's, still touched a bit with delirium, sang the chant of the Mule that reared and kicked one over the fence.

"I hope to live to see you win a world series championship, Joe," Connie said. "I know I will."

Then the worn McGillicuddy embraced the downcast McCarthy and the championship for 1929 was officially awarded.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Johnny Mason, of Scranton, Pa., gained a decision over Norman Brown, Indianapolis, in 10 rounds here last night.

Ens, Traynor Here; Pie to Be Treated

Manager Jewel Ens and Capt. Pie Traynor, of the Pirates, are in Pittsburgh today. Both will confer with Owner Dreyfuss regarding plans for the Buccos of next season.

Traynor, who was one of the writers for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph at the world series, was requested to return to this city by the Pittsburgh magnates. Pie's ailing hip is in need of attention and the bone in his nose which was broken months ago by one of Pat Malone's fast balls has not healed.

Owner Dreyfuss wants Pie to put himself in the care of a specialist for both his ailments. His hip injury is quite a serious matter. Every time he slid during the past campaign he felt a bad reaction.

Ens and Traynor expect to leave for St. Louis soon. The pilot of the club is a native of St. Louis and Traynor will visit with him for a short spell.

MACK PAYS TRIBUTE TO M'CARTHY

By Staff Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—In his ecstacy of delight, the thoughtful Connie Mack had a big word for the Cubs and Joe McCarthy. While his players were carrying on like schoolboys at a football game, Connie paid a tribute to the vanquished team.

"I hope Joe McCarthy lives to see the day his team wins a world championship," said Mack.

Later in the evening, Connie came up to the press section at the Bellevue-Stratford, where he received an ovation.

"I hope to see you all here again next year," he shouted to the journalists.

MAYBE PHILLIES?

Mack's little speech certainly didn't have any farewell ring. Apparently the tall tutor will stay right on the job. His eye had the flash of youth and doubtless the diamond sport has kept him young.

When Connie said he hoped he would see everybody here again next year, he couldn't have been thinking of those Phillies, could he? Be that as it may, the Quakers are ambitious.

Few better pitched games than the performance of Pat Malone have ever graced a world series. His stride as late as the eighth inning was magnificent. Pat's speed was dazzling and he had a hook like the one Johnny Morrison owned.

Max Bishop came up in the eighth to vie with Pat. The first pitch was a fast ball for a strike. Pat then let fly with a curve that broke off so sharply in front of the batter, he was plainly fooled. It was a strike and Mack flied to English in self defense.

WALBERG GOOD

Walberg, like Malone, had the batters at his mercy. The Cubs made only two hits off the left hander and McMillan's single was a fluke safety. Hornsby got hold of one ball; his liner to Miller in the eighth was a dandy drive, but it went straight at the outfielder.

Loses Bet; to Bat Flies to Philly From Texas

DALLAS, Tex., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Because the Athletics won the world series yesterday, Forrest F. Cole, of Dallas, must knock flies all the way to Shibe Park, Philadelphia. Ernest Luttrell, his betting opponent, will accompany him, furnishing a fungo bat and balls. They will start this morning and hope to be in Philadelphia by February 1.

50 CUBS WHIFF IN SERIES

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—The Chicago Cubs had the dubious satisfaction of setting one world's record during the world series—that for strikeouts. Led by Rajah himself, Rogers Hornsby, the Cubs fanned 50 times in five games, an average of 10 strikeouts per game. The "box score" of the Cubs' strikeouts is revealing:

Presidents Prep For Carnegie Battle

WASHINGTON, Pa., Oct. 15.—With every regular able to participate, Coaches Amos and Ride yesterday afternoon started the Wash-Jeff squad in the serious practice for the Carnegie Tech game of Saturday. A review of the Carnegie play as reported by scouts, and a light field drill constituted the work of yesterday as many of the players were badly bumped and bruised by the Bucknell players. Demas and McNeill are still nursing slight injuries, but both are expected to join the squad today and be ready for the contest at the end of the week.

EACH BUC GETS CLOSE TO $1,000

The runner-up Pirates just missed the $1,000 mark, individually, as their share of the world series pie, it developed today. The Pittsburgh players' pool amounts to $29,106.50.

Each Buccaneer will receive $995.05 as his share of the purse. Former Manager Donie Bush will receive this amount as will Manager Jewel Ens, Secretary Sam Watters, Coach Oscar Stanage and ex-Pirate pitcher, Carmen Hill.

29 FULL SHARES

At a recent meeting the Pirates voted 29 full shares, two of these to be split among three scouts, trainer, groundkeeper and clubhouse boy.

Dr. William L. Marks, who made the spring training trip with the club, was awarded a gift of $200 by the Pittsburgh athletes. Recruit Outfielder Mel Ingram, Gonzaga University star, who left the club in September to take up coaching duties, was given a $50 present for his emergency duties on several occasions.

Coaches Chick Fraser, Bill Hinchman and Joe Devine were awarded one full share, to be equally apportioned; another full share was voted to Trainer George Asten, Groundkeeper Jack Fogarty and Caleb (Socko) McCarey, popular clubhouse boy. Asten will receive one-half the share, the other half to be divided equally between Fogarty and McCarey.

The three coaches will each get $331.68; the trainer's share will be $497.52. The groundkeeper's and clubhouse boy's slices amount to $248.76.

PARKS TOO SMALL

The players' pool will cause regrets all down the line from the series participants to the fourth-place finishers. The disappointment is due to the lack of seating capacity at Shibe Park where the daily gross receipts fell almost $50,000 below the daily balances at Chicago.

The Yankees, in the American League, will collect a sum similar to the amount awarded the Pirates. Third-place money goes to the Giants and Browns, while the Cardinals and Indians will receive the balm that goes with winding up in the last position of the first division.

ANDERSON STOPPED

Hollywood Club Star Is Killed In Auto Crash

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—William Albert, 26, outfielder on the championship Hollywood baseball team, of the Pacific Coast League, was killed instantly last night in an automobile collision here. Lillian Parrier, 26, riding with him, was injured seriously.

Albert formerly played with the Springfield, Mass., club of the Eastern League.

HOOVER LIBERAL WITH APPLAUSE

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—President Hoover, attending his first game of the world series, was liberal but impartial in his applause.

From the time he marched across the field to his box between rows of blue-coated, brass-buttoned members of the Philadelphia constabulary, he showed the keenest interest in the proceedings. Neither the President nor Mrs. Hoover appeared to be bored at any stage of the thrilling game.

Quite evidently trying to be thoroughly neutral, nevertheless the President showed that he knew his baseball, for never did he applaud at the wrong time.

LAUGHS AT KIKI

His first show of unusual interest came in the Cubs' half of the second inning. Cuyler reached first after Wilson had been forced at second on his roller to the box. Suddenly Kiki darted toward second as Ehmke turned toward the mound. Ehmke wheeled and ran toward first as the President leaned forward in his chair. Hoover's eyes snapped with excitement as the fleet Cub outfielder was trapped among a swarm of Athletics. As the ball sped from Ehmke to Foxx to Boley to Foxx again and then again to Boley, he smiled at Cuyler's twisting efforts to extricate himself from the trap. When the hurler Cochrane finally took a throw and dived on Cuyler to retire him, Hoover laughed.

The President's first vigorous applause was saved for a feat by Woodie English, the Cub shortstop. To open the third Dykes drove a short fly between short and center, apparently a safe hit. English captured the ball on the dead run, while dashing backward. Turning to Mrs.

HOOVERS SEE CUBS DROP LAST GAME

By CHARLES J. DOYLE, Staff Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—One pitched ball today stood between the Cubs and the prestige of representative champions which might have been theirs. And a Jersey boy of German extraction who learned his first major league tricks as a Pirate converted that momentous pitch into a homer that practically decided the world series baseball banner in favor of Connie Mack's Athletics.

Montclair, N. J., last night was proud of baseball's biggest hero. His name is George Haas, and while it hurts to say it, George seems to have deserved the great fortune that has come to him, for the upstanding lad used his baseball intelligence to upset the whole Cub machine after the Bears had stolen the show in front of President and Mrs. Hoover and more than 30,000 people who do not have motorcycle escorts when they go to a ball game.

HOOVER "FORGOTTEN"

It is not meant as an unpatriotic utterance to state that 30,000 citizens of the City of Brotherly Love made the nation's chief play second fiddle to a smart baseball kid for several minutes last evening. As Al Simmons scurried over the plate in the ninth with the run that decided the series, it was noted that the President and his party was forgotten as Connie's victorious players embraced each other with such unrestrained show of feeling that must have made the President and the first lady of the land think that there is something big in baseball.

In time the crowd cooled down a bit the President was accorded the the ovation and courtesy due his station. The members of the important party may have been neutral in the matter, but they did not try to hide their merry feelings as they left the park under a barrage of cheers.

The lad who snatched the victory right out of the grasp of the Cubs in the fifth clash is reported to have outfoxed the Bears at the eleventh hour. Today he is credited to have guessed a fast ball and what he did to it will be written deeply into the archives of the Haas family.

MALONE HERO IN DEFEAT

One of the principal victims of the detonation was Pat Malone, of Altoona, than whom there was no better pitcher in baseball in this particular diamond classic. And Pat shouldn't feel so badly, for he is a hero in defeat.

Malone, painting an October masterpiece on the baseball curtain, had held the smashing Macks to two singles through eight masterly innings. Connie Mack sent Pinch-hitter French to the plate instead of Rube Walberg at the beginning of the ninth half of the ninth. The Cubs owned two runs while the A's were scoreless at this late moment. Altoona Pat turned in a pretty job of fanning the pinch man and Max Bishop stepped up. Bishop is somewhat of a pest in the leadoff position; at this trying time he singled to left.

Haas was next—and George had whiffed in his previous joust with Malone and Taylor. Perhaps Taylor signalled for a fast ball; in any event Pat left fly with a swifter, letters high and on the inside. The story is now that Haas guessed the Cubs for such a serving and he put all of his left hand swing against the rocket. The impact was terrific and before you could say Jack Robinson, the liner disappeared over the fence. And in that same jiffy, a pastoral setting was transformed into bedlam.

PAT SHOWS METTLE

Al Simmons and Bing Miller then proceeded to win the contest, but even this great feat was an anticlimax to the main issue. Haas had to come through, it would appear, to keep the home team in the game.

The Cubs rallied around Malone after the Haas homer in an effort to steady him up. Pat showed his mettle in taking Mickey Cochrane out of the picture for the second out. Simmons followed with a terrific double to the fence in right center. Manager McCarthy ordered a pass for Jimmy Foxx. That was good

FREEMAN BEATS LEVINE IN GREAT FIGHT

WILLIAMS ENDS PANKA'S K. O. STREAK

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

The best main bout that Motor Square Garden has housed in several years was dished up last night to the largest crowd in a long spell in the East End arena, which was staging its second show of the fall and winter season.

George Panka.

Tommy Freeman, of Cleveland and Erie, and Georgie Levine, of Brooklyn, were the principals, and the pair of veteran heavy-welterweights gave as classy an exhibition of cool boxing and sharp punching at both long range and close quarters as the most exacting critic could ask. There never was an idle moment in the battle, and perhaps only the fact that neither boxer was a local man with a following prevented the fans from getting up on their chairs and acting up over the thing. The crowd never got really enthusiastic, but simply sat back and enjoyed the spectacle, seemingly transfixed by the sight of two out-of-town windup performers putting up such an earnest and sincere effort.

Only at intervals did the customers stir themselves out of their quiet appreciation of the classic and then it was to protest against the referee's action in parting them in the clinches. Ordinarily, the complaint is that the referee does not break the boxers quickly enough. Last night, however, Freeman and Levine were doing their best work at close quarters and were fighting their way both in and out of the clinches.

FREEMAN SETS PACE

Freeman was the winner of the masterpiece, receiving the unanimous vote of the judges and the referee. As a matter of fact, he won every round, some of them by large margins and some by mere shades, yet the cool and resourceful Levine conducted himself in such a manner that the contest always remained interesting, or, even more, fascinating.

There was Freeman, bulky of build and cherubic of countenance, always up on his toes, plunging in and poking a solid left to the head and then grabbing Levine about the neck with his left and peppering him with his right to the head and body or slashing away with both hands in there. Levine, tall, sleek and rangy, couldn't halt Freeman inside, but only once did he utter a protest against Tommy's holding and hitting, and, when it went unheeded, in a late round, he took to blazing away inside himself. Earlier in the battle, he depended upon a straight left jab and a fine right cross in an attempt to box his way out in front.

Never was either man in danger of a knockout, and there were no knockdowns, although each soaked up oodles of punishment. Freeman suffered a scratch over his left eye in the first round and Levine's right eye was cut underneath in the third and discolored thereafter. They wound up the fight with a round of toe-to-toe battling that was a treat.

Levine did not appear quite as good as when he boxed Jack Zivic twice here three years ago, but he still retains a lot of his class and boxing skill and is one of the cagiest of the headliners. As for Freeman, his whirlwind exhibition of punching was such that the Garden will come close to being taxed to its capacity the next time he is brought back here for a match with a worthy opponent.

PANKA SURVIVES TEST

Overshadowed only by the main bout was the appearance of George Panka, the heavyweight knockout king, of Homestead, against Long Tom Williams, Negro, of Chicago and Cleveland, in the second six-round battle. The fight went the limit, marking the first time Panka has failed to win by a knockout in his eight professional starts, and was ruled a draw when the judges disagreed, Judge Joe Keally giving it to Panka, Judge Frank Brown to Williams and the referee, Eddie Kennedy, voting for a draw.

Williams was the real winner and the crowd did not approve of the deadlock verdict, making itself heard with booing. The Negro, tall and rangy and possessed of considerable more experience than the youthful Panka, was equipped to provide the acid test to the latter, and he did that little thing, while Panka, in actual, if not official, defeat, came through with more credit than in any of his three previous starts here. For the first time since George's debut, the local fans had a chance to see one of his bouts go beyond the first round and to judge his gameness and ability to assimilate punishment, and he did not fail to measure up. The experience he got out of this bout is sure to prove of more value to him in shaping his future than all of the setup knockout victories that adorn his early record.

Williams was an eleventh-hour substitute, obtained when efforts to land Ace Dobbins, of Clarksburg, W. Va., proved futile, and the Negro showed by his movements that he had the necessary experience to prove just what the doctor ordered in the way of a tryout for George.

Panka opened in his customary style, crowding close and figuratively trying to mob his opponent. He landed his best punches on the chin, but Williams took them well and kept shambling about on his big flat feet. After a little more than a minute of forcing, and missing as often as he landed, Panka tired and then Williams began to get to work, sinking long lefts to the body as he pulled his chin out of the range of Panka's swings. Late in the round, Panka swung a desperate right to the body and Williams went down for a count of one. He rallied quickly, however, and was putting up a good fight at the bell.

TIDE TURNS IN THIRD

The second round was a bruising one, with Williams starting off by crossing two rights to the head as Panka worked his way in close. Williams appeared to be fighting in a daze, but kept forcing Panka along the ropes, trying to get him set for a solid punch. The bell found both tired, with Panka having a slight edge.

From this point on the tide turned and the last four rounds went to Williams. Tom came up refreshed for the third round and speedily put Panka, the steam now gone from the latter's blows, on the defensive. He kept backing George about and hammering his right to the body whenever he could catch up with the Homesteader. Toward the end of the round, Panka's inexperience came to light when he turned his back to his Negro opponent and began to run for cover several times. He appeared to be all in as the round ended.

Williams stalked George all around the ring, driving him from rope to rope, throughout the fourth round and ripping home uppercuts to the head and body. Panka held on time after time and tried to weave and bob his way out of danger only to run into more uppercuts with his head lowered. Suddenly, just at the bell, Williams, apparently exhausted from his own efforts, dropped to the floor, but was up without a count.

Thinking Williams was on the verge of collapse, Panka came out driving for the head again in the fifth round, but Williams had regained his strength and speedily hammered him off and dictated the fighting throughout the round. Frequently he held Panka on the end of his left fist and battered him with his right, but George was game and stood up under the beating.

Panka seemed to get his second wind during the rest before the last round and made a creditable finish, fighting more than he had done at any time since the second round. But the decision of a draw was not justified, nevertheless.

Both scaled 194½ pounds.

ANDREWS DISAPPOINTS

Heavy Andrews, highly-touted Erie boxer, with height, reach, weight and punch in his favor, made a miserable fight against Gene Reed, formerly of Los Angeles and now of Fayette City, in the eight-round semi-final and, while he was posing and shaping up prettily round after round, permitted the small but willing Reed to outscore him in five of the eight rounds, with one even, only to have the judges agree on Heavy as the winner, to the audible disgust of the fans. The referee, Al Grayber, called it a draw. Andrews was about as pleasing to watch as Johnny Carey, another Erie staller, who has been a yawn and a snore in his every local appearance. Reed weighed 140 pounds against 143½ for Andrews.

Joe Slumbo again was the announcer and went over well in his second appearance. A. C. Couch acted as timer, Grayber and Kennedy divided the refereeing and Brown and Keally judged all of the bouts.

It was announced that Willie Davies, of Charleroi, the uncrowned flyweight champion, would meet Franklin Young, of Detroit, claimant of the Michigan flyweight title, in the main bout next Monday night. Young is a Negro, not well known in these parts, but is heralded as a good little ringman.

CUBS' RUNS IN VAIN

CUYLER AND STEPHENSON TALLY

The Cubs got off to a two-run lead in the fourth inning of the final game of the world series at Philadelphia yesterday when Cuyler and Stephenson scored, as pictured above, but the Athleics' three-run rally wiped out this margin in the ninth and ended the fall classic.

CUBS, MACKS ARE MATCHED WELL—PIE

By Harold "Pie" Traynor

Captain of the Pittsburgh Pirates.
(Written exclusively for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.)

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—It's all over now, folks, and the National League, in defeat, should have the sportsmanship necessary to let the honors and spoils go to the American League without any alibis or fault-finding. Connie Mack has won four games honestly and courageously; the umpiring throughout the series was as fair for one as for the other; perhaps the breaks of the sport favored the new champions to some extent, yet they are always a part of the game and it behooves us all to accept the bitter position.

Pie Traynor.

The point I would like to make has to do with the relative merits of the two clubs. Even American Leaguers of long standing admit that there is no marked difference between the two clubs in the point of collective skill. The fact that the Athletics won four out of five games reflects credit on the A's, but I still think the two teams are very evenly matched and I actually gave the Cubs an edge at the outset of the series.

When Pat Malone fanned Pinch-hitter French at the start of the ninth inning yesterday, it looked as if the National League was coming into its own again, even after that terrible seventh inning Saturday. Pat, after fanning French, saw only two putouts stand between him and a victory that would have made the series three and two. Moreover, many National League partisans are peeved over the loss of Saturday's game, but one has to give the Mack tribe much credit for taking advantage of their opportunities in this contest.

In the final game, the Cubs made one pitch too good for George Haas and see what a heavy penalty they paid. Malone, apparently, served Haas a fast pitch on the inside. A second guess would say a curve should have been shot at the batter. We all know that Haas made a smashing homer on the drive, and no matter how much courage one has, a thing of this sort will have a demoralizing effect.

It seems the misfortune of the National League to pay dearly for what seems like a little mistake. A world series is not very long at best, and the flag-winning teams of the rival circuit appear to take advantage of the little things that help to decide a series.

Haas is a good batter and many will state that he should have been given a hook. Manager McGraw, of the Giants, often is criticized because he makes his pitchers throw curves in pinches. McGraw's medicine here might have been just the right thing. Maybe the Cubs would have lost in the long run, but if they had copped the fifth fight, they would have had a good chance for ultimate victory. Besides, their stock as champions would have been higher. It is still high with many of their supporters, but the general public will not accept the contention without a lot of argument.

Little Money Bet On World Series

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—(INS.)—The 1929 world series which ended yesterday with Bing Miller's double saw less money wagered on the outcome than any post-season affair in history, Broadway commissioners declare.

In contrast with the Yankee-Card series in 1926 and the Yankees' battles with the Pirates and Cards in '27 and '28, where millions were wagered, very little money changed hands during the series just completed.

The betting commissioners attribute the light betting to the fact that the Athletics were such strong favorites from beginning to end.

CHICAGO FANS DISAPPOINTED

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Sympathy mingled with hope for better returns next season was the mental reaction of Cub fans yesterday as their favorites blew up and out of the now historic world series picture of 1929.

To three-fourths of the fans, who concentrated everywhere a radio report was available, it was no surprise when the Cubs lost their lead and the game in the ninth inning. Most of them feared it, knowing full well the comeback habits of Connie Mack's Elephants, and the blow-up temperament of Pat Malone and his mates.

"But wait until next year," most of them countered. "Owner William Wrigley wanted a National league pennant and got one. He wants a world championship and he'll get it. He's funny that way."

There is no secret hereabouts that Wrigley is planning to do some more spending during the winter to get a star pitcher or two and a third baseman, who can hit as well as field. Several well established stars of the game have attracted his attention as well as that of Manager Joe McCarthy and what they want they usually get.

BOUT POSTPONED

AMATEURS BOX TONIGHT

Amateur boxing insofar as the bi-monthly bouts of the Twenty-seventh Ward A. C., of the North Side, are concerned, moves indoors tonight, with the staging of a show in St. Andrew's Lyceum, Chateau street. Seven bouts are scheduled, with Ray Bauer, of the home club, meeting J. R. Schuster, unattached, in the main event. They are light-heavyweights. Other bouts on the card are:

The boxing show scheduled for tonight at Butler has been called off by order of the State Athletic Commission. Teddy Welch and Jackie Murray were to box in the main bout. Failure to file contracts of the boxers with the commission brought about the board's action.

BOUTS AT YOUNGSTOWN

Willie Michel, of Belgium, meets Jackie Dugan, of Louisville, and Davy Abad, of Panama, opposes Joe Pagalina, also of Louisville, in 10-round bouts at Youngstown tonight. Al Reno boxes Barney Davis, Jackie Powers engages Jackie Ward and Walter Pickard meets Gus Duncan in preliminaries.

Eddie Brannon, Negro lightweight, of the Hill, who holds two decisions over Andy Andrucci, has been signed to box Billy Franke, of New Kensington, in the second bout at McKeesport Thursday night. Franke formerly boxed in the amateur ranks under the name of Frankie Porto and has appeared in a couple of tournaments in the Tube City. Buck McTiernan and Tony Ross box the main bout and Walter Majeske, formerly of Saginaw, Mich., but now making his home in Wilkinsburg, meets Jackie Herman, of Wheeling, in the eight-round semi-final at McKeesport.

Benny Burns, of Akron, who boxes Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, in the 10-round windup at the Moose Temple Friday night, has appeared in this section only once before. That was with Cuddy DeMarco at McKeesport, two years ago. Since then he has been doing a lot of traveling and boxing in foreign lands and is said to be a rip-tearing slugger who should put up a great battle with the hard-belting Belmont.

WALLACE TO BOX RANDALL

Harry (Kid) Wallace, of Philadelphia, has been substituted for Joe Corelli, local welterweight, as Tiger Joe Randall's opponent at Johnstown Thursday night. Corelli is not in condition to box this week following his two recent defeats by Benny Burns and Frankie Palmo.

Tommy Moore, of Jamestown, N. Y., wants to show two of his boxers, Tony Brown, featherweight, and Edgie (Scrappy) Ryan, welterweight, here.

Hans Roberts, the German welterweight, who was the hit of the show at the Moose Temple last Friday night, has been matched to box Marty Simmons, of Wilkinsburg, in the semi-final to the Jimmy Belmont-Benny Burns bout in the same ring Friday night.

Steve O'Malley, of Bellaire, O., has injured a hand in training and canceled his match with Tug Phillips at Washington, Pa., Thursday night, and Paris (Kid) Cangy, of New Castle, has been signed to take his place. Walter Ketchel meets Leo Genet in the eight-round semi-final and Lee Sala is in with Joe Midway for one of the six-round preliminaries.

Rio and Carpentier Battle to Draw

MEADVILLE, Pa., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Frankie Rio, Cleveland, and U. S. Carpentier, New Kensington, fought a 10-round draw here last night. Louis Severo, Meadville, won by a technical knockout over James Duffy, McKeesport, in the fifth round of a scheduled 10-round fight.

Nick Severo, Meadville, won from Young Busg, McKeesport, in the same manner, the end coming after 35 seconds in the first round. Kid Derry, Kittanning, won by a technical knockout from Young Barnes, Meadville, in the third round.

Rodgers to Develop New Backfield

MORGANTOWN, Oct. 15.—In an effort to discover a new backfield combination which can provide a stronger running attack, Head Coach Ira Rodgers, of the West Virginia University squad, had his reserves in an hour's scrimmage against the scrubs here last night. The second-string men who did not see service in the Pitt game and others who were in only a short time, were directed against the other reserves in offensive play.

WILSON SERIES SWAT STAR

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Hack Wilson, considered by many the goat of the world series, was the leading slugger in the matches just concluded between the Athletics and Chicago Cubs.

Wilson, the center fielder, who lost three flies in the burning rays of the sun on Saturday which ruined the morale of the National League champions, batted .471, far surpassing every other player. He made eight hits in 17 trips to the plate, seven singles and a triple.

For the Athletics, Third Baseman Jimmy Dykes, the handy man of Connie Mack's ensemble, was the star. Jimmy batted .421 and many here consider him the luminary of the series, although the fans can never forget the thrill that Howard Ehmke's pitching gave them in that first game.

Nearly all the sluggers were up to par, with the exception of Rogers Hornsby, who batted only .238. Hazen Cuyler hit .300 and Stephenson batted .316.

Catcher Mickey Cochrane, of the A's, swatted at a .400 clip, and Al Simmons hit an even .200. The A's batted .281 in the series and the Cubs .235.

Umpire Is Charged With Manslaughter

PAULDING, O., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—A charge of manslaughter was placed yesterday against Clyde Crone, 45, of Grover Hill, father of 10 children, who, while acting as umpire at a game here Sunday, killed John Straley, 18, with his fist, according to reports from Sheriff Frank Jackson. The sheriff stated Crone was released from the county jail late yesterday when he furnished $5,000 bond. The charge was filed against him by George Straley, father of the youth, the sheriff stated.

MORBITO SOLVES TECH BACKFIELD PROBLEM

JOE DOES WELL IN KARCIS' BOOTS

By JESS CARVER.

The ill wind that blew Johnny Karcis out of Carnegie Tech's line-up against Western Reserve Saturday at Cleveland blew Joe Morbito into the spotlight as Johnny's first string understudy, and seems to have cleared up the Plaid backfield situation.

Previous to Saturday's game, when Morbito shone to such advantage as a line bucker, the Tartans were not sure just how they stood in the matter of an understudy for Karcis. Armentrout, who goes best as a halfback or end, had been used in the spot, was used at full against Bethany in the opener and also played that position for a time against Thiel. This arrangement was not satisfactory, for the lithe young star is needed for wing and halfback duty.

Joe Morbito

Karcis has a trick knee, and it may develop that he'll be forced to spend too much time on the bench, for these bad knees have a habit of remaining trick. If Morbito continues his fine work, Armentrout can be released from substitute fullbacking and Joe will get the chance he has been seeking for two years.

PROGRAMS LAUDED

Don Saunders and Chuck Kenny have done a fine job with the Pitt programs this year. Many and complimentary were the remarks passed on the books at the West Virginia game. The signing of several artists and writers of national reputation for contributions, as well as the proposed series by local football critics, was a good move.

Pitt will leave for Nebraska Wednesday night over the Pennsy, arriving in Chicago early Thursday morning. The day will be spent in the Windy City, with a workout carded for Stagg Field in the afternoon.

Leaving Chicago that evening, the team will travel over the northern route to Omaha instead of taking the Burlington Route as was the case last year. Coach Sutherland will not take his Panthers into Lincoln until Saturday morning. The squad will spend Friday and Friday night in Omaha.

TECH FACES TEST

It will be difficult to get odds either way on the Tech and Wash-Jeff game here Saturday. Carnegie must enter this game untested by a major foe, while the Presidents will have the slight advantage of having played and won one tough ball game.

The game between Grove City and Westminster at New Wilmington, Saturday, will mark the thirty-fourth meeting between the two institutions. Grove City has won 16 games, Westminster 13 and three have been tied.

D. AND E. GETS BREAK

The defeat of New York University by Fordham creats for Cam Henderson's undefeated Davis Elkins eleven a fine opportunity to distinguish itself when it tackles the former in New York October 20.

If Major Cavanaugh's eleven gets by Holy Cross this week in safety, and the Hurricane hangs one on the Quantico Marines, the battle in New York ought to draw a fine crowd.

Staff-mate Howdy Harpster says that Notre Dame will spell trouble with a capital T for the Tartans this year. Harpy saw the Irish beat the Navy, and he tells me that this guy Mullins (Moon they call him) can go to town like a champ when toting that ball.

LOYOLA HERE

Another mid-western eleven will take a punch at the Dukes this week. Loyola University, of Chicago, invades Forbes Field. The Chicagoans, unbeaten so far, may be the team to send the Dukes toppling. The team has an impressive record to date . . . but so have the Dukes. Loyola has met no opponent as strong as West Virginia.

If Duke (not Dukes) give the Navy a tough ball game Saturday, it will serve to boost Pitt stock no little. A year ago, the identical Duke team that Pitt crushed two weeks ago held the Navy to a 6-0 score. Of course, comparisons based on scores are the bunk, but it is a lot of fun to draw 'em.

Thiel, safely over its first Conference hurdle, will run up against another one in Geneva this week. The Lutherans, with little Mike Mitchell running the club, sank Waynesburg Saturday. The Covenanters, however, rate 60 per cent stronger than the Yellow Jackets.

The first big intersectional game of the year will be played Saturday, California and Penn usurping the sport spotlight in Philadelphia. How'd you like to make a little bet on Penn?

WRONG RULING IS CHARGED

LEWISBURG, Pa., Oct. 15.—Contending that Umpire D. W. Merriman made a mistake in his ruling on a Bucknell play in the game here last Saturday against W. and J., Coach Carl Snavely, who is not usually given to complaints, said yesterday that Bucknell was the victim of an astounding football error by an official as was ever made in any major college game in the country. Early in the third quarter the Bison made a short pass into the line. The ball seemed to go dead, but after a short delay Demas, a visiting guard, came out of the scramble with the ball and raced to the 11-yard mark, where he was overtaken by a Bucknell player. Bucknell claimed that the play was an incompleted pass, while there were many close observers who said the Bucknell man who caught the ball dropped it and that the play should be listed as a fumble. Apparently one or two of the officials thought as the fans did; all but Merriman claimed not to have seen the play.

Under the new rules, if the play was a fumble and W. and J. had properly recovered, they, as the defensive team, could not have run with it. Snavely stated, and at best for the Presidents, the ball could only have gone to them at the point of recovery, not on the 11-yard line. Merriman, on the other hand, it was reported, stated that the ball was intercepted by Demas in the struggle and that he dropped it and since he had control of it he became the offensive player and was entitled to run with it as it was the new offensive team's fumble. Bucknell never recovered from the shock of the ruling and the Bisons, on the next play, watched Rush race around the end standing up for a touchdown.

STRUB STOPS HACKLEY

Chicago Loyola Drills for Dukes

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Gathered on the turf of the new stadium to inaugurate the week of workouts which will lead up to Saturday's game with Duquesne at Pittsburgh, the Loyola University football squad did a bit of drill on formations and a good deal of listening to the remarks of Coach Dan Lamont yesterday afternoon.

With two victories under their belts, having defeated both Oklahoma City University and Coe College, the Loyola gridders are beginning to get a definite line upon their strengths and their shortcomings.

baseball, regardless of the winning climax. The Cubs again tried to bolster up Malone, but, with two balls and two strikes, Miller whipped a liner to right-center that tallied Simmons with the marker needed to clinch the title.

Howard Ehmke, who rose to heights in the first game, was shelled off the rubber by the Cubs in the fourth round after two were out. Cuyler, Grimm and Taylor came through with three hits, while Stephenson drew a pass in the round. After Taylor's hit had driven in the second run of the inning, Rube Walberg stepped out and pitched in the stride of Malone for the remainder of the contest.

E. PITTSBURGH, M'KEESPORT MATCHED

By TOM BIRKS.

Featuring the McKeesport Olympic-East Pittsburgh Firemen battle at the Quarry Stadium as the outstanding battle, another long list of real games will be played this week-end. Of course, some of the leading teams are finding it hard to get together. On Thursday, fans of the district will have another chance to see independent football played under flood lights. The Smock Independents will battle with the Monessen Olympics. During last Thursday's battle, with the Smock outfit defeating Charleroi, 3,000 fans watched the night session, and according to Manager Zimmerman, it went over big. Monessen will give Smock a battle. According to Zimmerman, he intends to bring all of the leading clubs, including West View, for the night games.

CLUBS WELL MATCHED

Last Sunday's games bring out the fact that many of the teams again are evenly matched. McChesneytown looked good, according to critics at East Pittsburgh. Kennedy always had a good backfield, and now the Latrobe man has improved his line considerably.

McKeesport and East Pittsburgh are far stronger than last season.

The latter has strengthened a good line, and Chamberlain looks just as good as any end who wore the Firemen livery. West View, with the keen Berkman, is reported to be far stronger, and followers of the Park Club for many years state the line is plunging far better than ever before.

BURNS HAS REAL OUTFIT

Burns is reported by Port Vue to have a real club. Sharon and Kirkman will help the backfield to do big things, but there is little chance of the Burns Club meeting the leading contenders before Turkey Day. There is a good chance that West View might appear at Parnassus.

The Harvey Majestics will meet the Charleroi Whippets at Exposition Park, Sunday afternoon. Charleroi is expected to give the Majestics a hard battle.

Philly to Fete New Champions Thursday

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Philadelphians will fete the World Champion Athletics Thursday night at an official dinner at the Penn Athletic Club when the conquerors of the Chicago Cubs will be the guests of the city, the Chamber of Commerce and the Sporting Writers' Association.

Plans for the dinner were made in Mayor Mackey's office soon after the final game yesterday by representatives of the organizations sponsoring it. Counsel for the Athletics' baseball club said every member of the team would attend. Invitations will be sent to about 1,200.

Long's Sport Comment

Bush and Malone for the Cubs, and Ehmke and Earnshaw for the A's.

MACK'S star left-handers had been expected to feature the series, yet neither Grove nor Walberg started a single game in the string of five. While they were on duty as relief men, however, they demonstrated that they held the mastery over the Cubs' vaunted array of right-hand hitters.

Grove and Walberg pitched a total of 12 2-3 innings in relief roles, and during that time the Cubs scored only a single run against them, that lone tally being an unearned one off Walberg. After relieving Ehmke yesterday in the fourth inning, Walberg gave a brilliant exhibition. He bowled over the first 10 men who confronted him, and out of 16 batters faced he allowed only two to reach first base.

THE series, though the quality of play at times was very much on the bush league order, was remarkable for the number of "classic" records it saw broken. Exactly 50 Cubs struck out, breaking the old mark of 44, charged against the Giants in 1911 and the Yankees in 1921. Hornsby led with eight whiffs, one more than Cuyler, within two of George Kelly's individual record of 10, set in 1921; Ehmke fanned 13 men in one game, surpassing Ed Walsh's total of 12, set in 1906; Cochrane had 59 putouts behind the bat, eight above the old record of 51, held by Muddy Ruel; this was the only time just one base was stolen, McMillan making the only steal of the series yesterday; and by amassing 10 runs and 10 hits in the seventh inning Saturday, the A's beat the old marks of eight runs and eight hits in an inning, established by the Giants in 1921.

Hoover had laughed at Cuyler in the second inning. He laughed with him in the fifth. The Cub right-fielder was cheered by vigorous clapping of the Presidential hands when he leaped into the air and speared Simmons' long fly.

STRETCHES WITH FANS

Early in the game Mrs. Hoover called for her coat, and with the folds of the garment wrapped about her, she kept a close watch of the play.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hoover applauded vigorously when Mule Haas drove the ball out of the park to tie the score in the ninth. As Bing Miller hit his terrific drive with the winning run on second base, both jumped to their feet and were standing with most of the crowd of 30,000 persons when Simmons dashed excitedly across the plate with the run that won the game and the world championship for the Athletics.

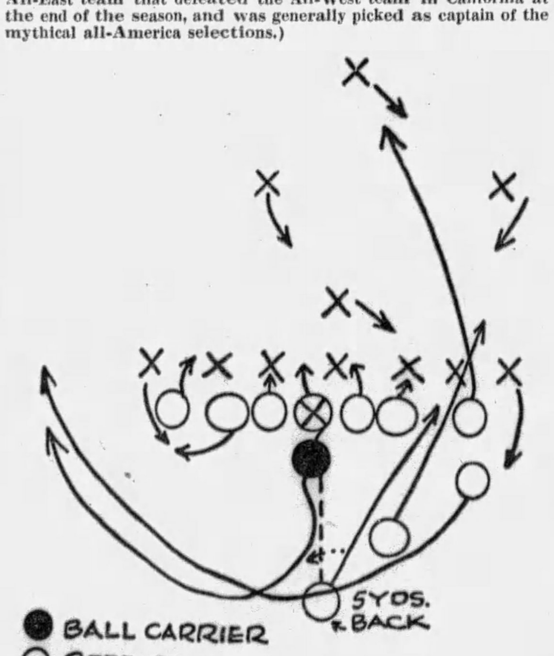
All-America Quarterback, 1928
Now Coach at Shady Side Academy

(Note.—Harpster, as the quarterback of the Carnegie Tech eleven last fall, gained national recognition as one of the most brilliant leaders of all time in the football realm. Experts hailed him as "the player with the mind of a coach." He captained the All-East team that defeated the All-West team in California at the end of the season, and was generally picked as captain of the mythical all-America selections.)



NO. 7—DOUBLE PASS SCORING PLAY.

A GOOD scoring play. Quarterback takes ball from center, pivots around and tosses ball to back man. Back man follows fullback through tackle and slips ball back to quarterback, who has started to run back immediately after the toss. (The pass from back man to quarterback must be lateral.) Outside back starts "on the ball" and runs over spot where back man has just left. Quarterback follows outside man around end. Left tackle moves out to take end.

Bankers Take Up Stocks — New York Curb Market

BANKERS TURN TO STOCKS AS BONDS SLUMP

Investment Men Relinquish Time-Honored Aversion To Speculative Issues

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

QUEBEC, Que., Oct. 15.—Short term recent turns of the wheels of chance in the realm of finance have temporarily at least diminished the relative importance of investment bankers.

Recognizing that under existing conditions there was little work for the traditional creators and fashioners of bonds, most of the member houses in the Investment Bankers' Association of America, whose eighteenth annual convention opens here today at the Chateau Frontenac, have confirmed to modern tendencies, and gone in for the issuance of common stocks.

One by one the staid conservative houses have relinquished their time honored aversion to speculative securities and stepped in line with popular preferences. Of the larger houses, only Halsey, Stuart & Co. has stuck to its guns, and continued to concentrate on bonds.

STOCKS VS. BONDS

At conventions like these, frequently the most timely and delicate subjects are sidetracked on the platform, but inevitably they crop up in private conversations in the hotel lobby and in the suites of the delegates. Perhaps no oher topic is of more lively interest to the 1,100 delegates and guests than the question whether the drift towards stocks and away from bonds has not been overdone.

Many of the bankers here are inclined to think that a swing back to bonds lies ahead, although there is disagreement as to when the turn will come. There is widespread agreement that this question hinges on the credit situation, about which there are diverse and contradictory opinions. The widely heralded dip by Hornblower & Weeks on the eve of the convention that this is a good time to buy high grade railroad, public utility and industrial bonds is causing widespread discussion here, and the bond men, who have been through a lean period, hope that the judgment of the New York and Boston house is correct.

It will be recalled that Secretary Mellon advised the public to "buy bonds" half a year ago. Unquestionably current credit conditions enable the investor to acquire an excellent yield with a high degree of safety in the bond market. The real problem of the investor, however, is not whether to own bonds or shares, but rather to consider whether the time has come to vary the proportions of equities and fixed maturity obligations in this portfolio.

LIGHT ON CREDIT

Rollin A. Wilbur, president of the association and member of the Herrick Company, Cleveland, in his formal address today is expected to throw light on the relation to the present credit situation to the securities market.

The lean period for the investment houses results not only from the passing of bonds from popular favor, but also to some extent from the new adventures in large and dominant corporations in banker-less finance. Great corporations, like the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, have been able to dispose of their shares without a banking middleman directly to employes, customers and present stockholders. So far this year, the volume of bond financing is 25 per cent below that of the corresponding months in 1928.

On the other hand, new stock issues of equity financing operations have shown a 50 per cent gain. But much of the stock financing has been by outstanding corporations which hold shares directly by issuing rights to their existing roster of stockholders. Though such operations are frequently underwritten by investment bankers, the profits involved are comparatively narrow.

Another radical change in the investment banking business is being wrought by the tendency toward chain banks and branch banking. There are already 700 chain banking groups.

BASIC LINK IN SECURITY

The 26,000 banks of the country have constituted a basic link in the security distribution chain, and security creators here are concerned with the question as to how far the reduction of such outlets will go. In Canada, the delegates see only 11 chartered banks, with branches scattered in every town and city in the dominion.

In checking up on developments since the last annual meeting, the bankers concede that the outstanding change marketwise has been the extraordinary popularity of public utility issues, especially the shares of holding companies.

The delegates will formally ballot on Friday to confirm the selection of Trowbridge Callaway, of Callaway, Fish & Co., New York, as president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, which is potentially an organization of immense significance on world affairs. Its membership includes the various channels through which the outside world finances itself in the American market, and accordingly a convention of this body has more bearing on world conditions than numerous official parleys among politicians.

Mr. Callaway is the son of the founder of the American Locomotive Company, who was also a former president of the New York Central Railroad. The proposed new president has distinguished himself by reconciling banking ethics in the distribution of securities with actual conditions in the business.

CONT'L. CAN CO. SALES SET RECORD

Enjoying Best Year in Its History, President Says; Plant Facilities Expanded

By W. S. COUSINS, International News Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15. — The greatest year in the history of the company from the standpoint of sales and earnings, and further improvement to be shown in 1930 summarizes the American business outlook as seen by Carle C. Conway, president of Continental Can Company, Inc., second largest unit in the tin container manufacturing industry.

Mr. Conway, in an exclusive statement for International News Service, today cites the enormous increase in the company's facilities over the past two years as evidence of the management's confidence in the future of its products.

1930 OUTLOOK GOOD

"The current year will be the greatest year from the standpoint of sales and earnings in the history of the company," said Mr. Conway. "With minimum stocks of canned goods to be carried over from the current year's pack, and with general business continuing entirely satisfactory, further improvement will be shown in 1930."

Coinciding with the forward-looking policies adopted by other large industrial enterprises, in continually expanding manufacturing facilities in anticipation of a steadily increasing business, Mr. Conway points out his company has practically completed expenditures of $5,000,000 for new construction this year; three new plants have been put in operation and will be in full production next year; six other plants have been enlarged and modernized. In addition, Continental Can has taken over seven independent companies this year, full benefits from which will not be reflected until next year.

HUGE PACKS SEEN

Crops, best available index of the business year for can manufacturing companies, will this year show the second largest aggregate in history, if preliminary government forecasts materialize, according to Mr. Conway's statement.

It is estimated that more than 46,000,000 cases of corn, peas and tomatoes will be packed in 1929, which is nearly 13 per cent in excess of last year's total. Although this is an indication of the healthy increase Continental should show for the current year, the company is gradually decreasing its dependence upon crops, through expansion in the manufacture of tin containers for other lines of products.

BROADER MARKETS

As an evidence of the broad expansion of the container manufacturing industry, it is pointed out whereas a few years ago 85 per cent of cans manufactured were sold to vegetable and other food packers, at present only 65 per cent are used in these channels, while 35 per cent goes to packers of meats, oils, paints, coffee and other commodities.

In its research and experimental department in Chicago, Mr. Conway's company is developing new forms of containers and new packing processes. The latest accomplishment along these lines is a new type vacuum closing machine, recently perfected. Experiments in the packing of frozen fruits and vegetables, now being conducted, are expected to produce progressive improvements in the methods of preparing and distributing foodstuffs and other tinned commodities to the American homes, warehouses and industrial plants.

Education of Public Balks Fraudulent Promoters

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

QUEBEC, Oct. 15.

EDUCATION of the public has been the most potent factor in curtailing the operations of fraudulent promoters, Arthur G. Davis, field secretary, said yesterday following a meeting of the board of governors of the Investment Bankers' Association of America, held preliminary to first general session of the convention called for today.

Davis is the association's expert on laws to safeguard the public against security swindles. He was formerly manager of the Chicago Investors' Protective Bureau. He has the unique distinction of having had more than 9,000 persons apply to him for redress against bucketeers and other fraudulent operators and he has recovered more than $2,000,000 for victims of these swindles.

Opportunities for Selling

"THERE are more opportunities for selling investment securities today than at any previous time in history and the actual fraud is far less than in the past," Davis said. "One reason is the campaigns of education conducted by the National Better Business Bureau and other agencies.

"One concern which wished to sell an issue of its own securities through the mail sent out 60,000 letters. It received only one remittance. Ten years ago when the public was less informed as to the operation methods of legitimate and fraudulent houses this campaign would have resulted in 20,000 or more replies.

"While there are only about 50 leading stock swindlers in the country at present, there are 7,000 to 8,000 reputable security dealers. Twenty years ago there probably were 10 times as many fraudulent organizations but law enforcement, protective bureaus and public education are gradually reducing the number.

Eager to Believe Fairy Tales

"THIS is in spite of the fact that present-day conditions make a larger number of people vulnerable to the lure of the dishonest stock salesman. Many people have the same attitude toward stock speculation they had toward Florida land speculation. They are eager to believe fairy tales. It is fortunate that so much has been done to make the public able to discriminate on the houses with which they are dealing."

The good that can be done by able administration of security laws was emphasized by Davis. He stated that good administration was even more important than the laws themselves, since strong laws could be made worthless by incompetent officials, while active public officers could do much valuable work even with poor legal tools.

The results of committee meetings held yesterday are to be made public at the general session of the convention being calld today.

That the Federal Reserve authorities are taking a hand in cheapening call money, hoping that low rates will be unattractive to investors and cause the withdrawal of out-of-town and foreign funds.

That copper consumers must again enter the red metal market with larger orders during the latter half of this month.

Commission Adopts Conference Plan

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 15.—The Interstate Commerce Commission will use the conference plan in the work of bringing primary railroad valuations to date, Chairman Ernest I. Lewis told the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce here today.

"I favor adopting as far as possible this business-like method in the field of recapture of excess earnings," he said.

"Now that the Supreme Court has spoken in the O'Fallon case on the important question of valuation, there ought to be a reasonable chance for conference agreements. I believe this is possible if everybody could be persuaded to come in and put the cards on the table in full public view and to forget old suspicions and controversies."

HITS U. S. RAIL POLICY

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 15.—"Even-handed justice" is sought by the railroads in the competition between the facilities of the rail carriers and inland waterway operation, R. N. Aishton, president of the American Railway Association, said in an address before the Associated Traffic Clubs of America, meeting here today. He declared the railroads are not opposed to the development of inland waterway transportation if "economically justified," but they are opposed to the federal government entering into competitive transportation operation with them. Aishton named three things objected to by the railroads, first the government entering into competition; second, where the competitor is relieved from important items of operating costs, and lastly, to the method of making rates by the government barge line operation.

HEAVY BUYING HALTS STOCK DECLINE

Selling Pressure Against Utilities Temporarily Unsettles Share Market

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Renewal of selling pressure against the public utilities and some of the industrial leaders temporarily unsettled today's stock market, but the decline was checked by the resumption of large scale buying operations in the railroad shares.

Early selling was based primarily on the speculative belief that the market, which had recovered more than half the ground lost in the decline early this month, was due for a secondary reaction.

MONEY ADVANCED

Call money renewed at 6 per cent, but advanced to 7 in reflection of heavy mid-month demands, and the withdrawal of government funds on deposit in Federal Reserve member banks. Time money also displayed a slightly firmer undertone.

The drive against the public utilities was influenced largely by the recent decision of the Massachusetts Public Utility Commission denying the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston permission to split up its capital stock. American Telephone, Peoples Gas, American Water Works, North American, Pacific Lighting, Consolidated Gas and Standard Gas and Electric were all hammered down 4 to nearly 6 points.

Motor shares turned heavy on reports of decreasing output and sales of several of the leading manufacturers, but some of these are attributed to the introduction of new models. Auburn Auto broke 13 points and several others declined a point or two.

Western Union recovered all of its early loss of 9 points in the early afternoon rally, and Johns Manville quickly made up 7 points of its 8-point morning decline. U. S. Steel common dropped from an early high of 229½ to 223¾ and then rebounded as Wall street began to hear rumors of a special distribution to shareholders before the end of the year.

MAKE NEW HIGH

New Haven common assumed the the leadership of the railroad group by moving up 3 points to a new high record at 132½. The preferred advanced 3¾ points to a new high at 134¾. New York Central, Atchison, Baltimore and Ohio, Norfolk and Western and Northern Pacific sold 2 to 3½ points higher.

Timken Roller Bearing ran up 7½ points to a new high at 135 on buying influenced by the recent expansion of the company's business into new fields, particularly railroad equipment. National Biscuit, Simmons, Industrial Rayon and Hershey Chocolate also were well bought.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—With crop complaints numerous from Argentina, wheat firmed early today in the face of weakness shown by quotations at Liverpool. More inquiry for wheat by European continental countries was reported. Opening unchanged to ½c off. Chicago wheat later scored slight gains all around. Corn and oats displayed rallying powers, too, with corn starting ¼c to ½c down, but subsequently tending upward. Provisions were easy.

Uncertainties of the Argentine wheat crop were emphasized today by first reports from Cordoba and Buenos Aires provinces, and by unfavorable field advices from Bahia and Santa Fe districts. Liverpool stocks of wheat were increasing and were predicted to continue for several weeks. One estimate today put the present remaining Argentine exportable wheat surplus from last year's crop as high as 56,000,000 bushels.

Illustrating the critical situation which has arisen from unusual scantiness of European buying of North American wheat, official figures were cited today showing that Canadian wheat export for September amounted to only 9,697,000 bushels, against 31,076,000 bushels a year ago. Overnight export demand was described as continuing slack, but as a rule traders in wheat future deliveries here were disinclined to press the selling side of the market. Bearish news was regarded quite generally as fully discounted.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Raw sugar was dull and in absence of business prices were unchanged at 4.05c for spots duty paid.

Raw futures opened unchanged to 2 points lower under liquidation and some selling by houses with trade connections, promoted by the inactivity in the spot market. The selling, however, was not very aggressive, but at the same time the demand was light, and prices showed no change during the balance of the forenoon with traders inclined to limit fresh commitments and await developments.

Refined was unchanged at 5.50c for fine granulated with a good withdrawal demand, but new business light and supplied through second hands at around 5.40c.

COPPERWELD UP ON LOCAL MARKET

Stock Responds to Buying Orders With Sharp Gain; General List Irregular

Copperweld Steel moved up vigorously in the early dealings on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today, the move following a period of several days' narrow fluctuation in the issue.

Several hundred shares changed hands in the first hour's dealings with the stock spurting to 80 as compared with the opening at 77 and a low of 75 yesterday. Aside from the fact that the stock is closely held and responds easily to any increase in demand, there was no explanation of the move.

In the afternoon market some selling made its appearance in the fuel division. Western Public Service forfeited yesterday's gain and Lone Star dropped back to around 60.

Offsetting this was a sudden upturn in Blaw Knox, which ran up to around 55 as compared with the opening at 51¼.

Chain Stores Take Action To Earn Goodwill

By B. C. FORBES

THIS will interest many: A number of large chain stores systems have decided that one-third of 1 per cent of gross sales should be disbursed for civic and charitable enterprises in the communities in which they operate.

The secretary of the National Chain Stores Association estimates that, if this is generally done, chain stores will write a check for Main Street totaling between $20,000,000 and $35,000,000 a year.

ANOTHER fact: Investigation reveals that 32 chains now have a total of 172,707 stockholders. Of these, nearly 41,000 are employe. of the stores.

OUR railroads have been subjected to much hostile legislation before they awakened to the importance of convincing politicians that the nation's transportation systems were not owned by a few rich bankers, but by investors—large and small, men, women and children. More recently, public utility managers have emphasized how widespread is the ownership of their securities, with the result that regulatory bodies have thought twice before taking drastic anti-utility action.

Now it is the turn of chain stores to be threatened with restrictive legislation. Hence, their anxiety to do more than they have done in the past to win loval favor; hence, also, the new interest in finding out how narrowly or widely chain stores are owned. The editor of the Chain Store Review has kindly furnished this column, in advance of publication, the following interesting table showing the number of stockholders in various chains:

AT their recent convention in Chicago, the National Chain Store Association set themselves squarely to face their problem of public relations. A fund of $250,000 was set up to cover all the operating costs of the national association—and not, as an erroneous press report had it, for propaganda.

The chain stores propose, first, to set up a true research department, to study themselves and to educate themselves; second, they will strive to educate the public to the value of the chains as public servants.

Says the report of the executive committee:

"Our public relations activity must be directed to the attention of the following specific classes: The public, business men, women in the home, students in colleges and universities as to the promise of the chain store field for business careers, investors in chain store securities, banks and banking groups, farm population, labor organizations, federal and state executives . . . It is apparent that our first line of offense in this program is the man at the front—the employe. He is our everyday contact with the public. Our business depends first and last on the reactions of the public toward its treatment by our personnel."

After all, no industry, no corporation, can afford to ignore the effect its conduct has upon the mind and the temper of John Smith and John Smith's family.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Cotton opened steady today at an advance of 1 point to a decline of 1 point. There was a fair volume of business, but orders seemed to be evenly divided, with traders evidently finding no inspiration in the ruling of Liverpool, while the census report on domestic consumption was about as expected.

Southern selling and some local liquidation sent prices off to 18.17c for December and 18.36c for March during the early trading or about 2 to 4 points net lower, but there was enough covering or trade buying to hold the market fairly steady at the end of the first half hour.

The census report showed domestic consumption of 545,649 bales for September compared with 558,113 for August and 492,307 for September last year.

Liverpool cables reported hedging and liquidation in Liverpool and said that the cotton cloth market in Manchester was quieter, with moderate sales of both cloth and yarns.

The market showed a steadier tone after the early offerings had been absorbed. Europe was said to be showing a little more interest in the market at the lower level of prices, and some buying was reported for foreign trade account, as well as covering and a little commission house demand.

December contracts worked up to 18.28c, or 11 points from the lowest and about 7 points net higher. This rally was not fully maintained, but the market was quiet and steady, with active months ruling about 2 to 3 points net higher at midday.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—The Curb Market developed emphatic weakness, particularly in the utility division, today. There was little in the day's news to influence the market, although a rise in the call loan rate to 7 per cent was somewhat disappointing, bearing out bankers' predictions that the recent ease was due largely to temporary factors.

Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (00 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list):

Power and Light Shares Under Heavy Selling Pressure.

POWER AND LIGHT shares were the objects of concentrated selling pressure most of the day, yielding 3 to 7 points at the low levels. The decline was seemingly engineered by a well organized bear party which sought to capitalize the adverse influence which the decision in the case of the Edison Illuminating Company of Boston might have had on sentiment. The drive unquestionably brought out considerable liquidation inasmuch as there was a disposition in certain quarters of the street to fight shy of the utilities for the time being at least. Power stocks regained a part of their losses in the latter half of the day as selling pressure subsided.

Shares of the railway equipment manufacturing companies were set forth as representing an industry which should give an exceptionally good account of itself over the balance of this year and through 1930. General expectation is that the leading companies will show results for the current half of this year to have been the best in quite a while. Unfilled orders on their books have been increasing substantially, as indicated by the placing of heavy orders for freight cars last week, and large inquiries for additional requirements are known to be pending. Close followers of the situation were particularly partial to American Car Foundry, American Locomotive, Pullman, and Westinghouse Air Brake.

WARNER BROTHERS PICTURES is reflecting current prosperous conditions in the motion picture industry with new high records in earnings. It is estimated that profits in September, the first month of the company's new fiscal year, amounted to $2,000,000, or approximately equal to total earnings in the 12 months ended August 31, 1928, when profits were $2,044,841 for the year. For the 12 months ended August 31, 1929, earnings are estimated at $16,000,000, equal to $6 a share on the 2,698,000 shares of stock. Negotiations with Paramount are understood to be still pending with favorable prospects that the combination will be completed in the future.

If the ease in call money in the past week were to be continued by the Federal Reserve Board it would have considerable influence on the present important lenders of call funds, for it would cause a withdrawal of money by foreign interests as well as by corporations, insurance companies, investment trusts and others who were attracted to the call market by the high rates obtainable. Maintenance of a low rate would also result in the withdrawal of money by out-of-town banks, which have been maintaining large New York balances right along in order to take advantage of the excellent return available on their surplus funds employed in Wall street. Because of this view, the call money market is expected to be watched closely in the near future.

LORILLARD is looked upon by many as one of the outstanding opportunities among the tobacco shares. Increased cigaret prices will mean a good increase in earnings because the company's product has been showing steady gains in sales. Much of the accumulation in the stock has been for the account of interests prominently identified with the tobacco industry.

Estimates of Bethlehem Steel's earnings for the third quarter are higher than many expected. They have been responsible for good accumulation in the stock, for the predictions have come from sources which should be well-informed on the company's affairs. With nine months' balance for the common expected to be between $12 and $13 a share, it is figured that Bethlehem is selling out of line with many other industrials.

Time-O-Stat Co's Shipments Higher

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Shipments of Time-O-Stat Controls Company during the first nine months of 1929 increased $572,302 over the same period in 1928, or more than 64 per cent, Julius K. Luthe, president, stated in a letter to stockholders. Shipments from January 1 to October 1, this year, amounted to $1,461,837, compared with $889,535 a year ago. Shipments for the first nine months of 1929 were in excess of those for the entire 12 months of 1928.

In September, this year, shipments totaled $289,351, while in the same month of 1928 they were $187,401, or a gain of more than 54 per cent for September this year. Unfilled orders of the company on hand October 1 amounted to $346,811.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15. — The Commerce Commission authorized the New York Central Railroad to issue $10,200,000 of its 4½ per cent equipment trust of 1929 gold certificates which will be sold at not less than 94.919 per cent of par and accrued interest.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

TRY your hand at this fascinating game of Anagrambles—the game that is taking the town like the crossword puzzle craze took the whole nation for a ride through the dictionary.

The game is quite simple. Merely change the following words by the addition of the single letter indicated. Do not omit any letter of the original word. The letter may be inserted at the beginning of the word, anywhere within the word, or at the end. Thus, the word "pate," by the addition of the letter "l" becomes either "pleat" or "plate." The word "drag" may be changed to either "grade" or "raged" by the addition of the letter "e."

The original word must be changed in meaning by the commentary letter. To change "mine" by adding "d," to form "mined," would be incorrect. Rearrange the letters of your word to change its meaning, not its tense or number. Take a pencil now and write in your newly formed word in the spaces provided.

LAMAR, TOO, HAS ITS DAMON RUNYON

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

The score stood five to two. Then all at once a fly came out into the left field. Allen Hatfield muffed it, then, when he picked it up, threw it to Grandpa Regan on the third base. Grandpa caught the ball, but instead of putting it on the runner who was in about six feet off third, he threw it. If he was going to be so nice as to let that man in on third, he ought at least have heaved her to the home plate, and stopped the man just making a score. But No, sir! he flung it to first. That is he flung it in that general direction, but as a matter of fact it went over among the flivers, back of the filling station.

A Story as Fascinating as "CYTHEREA"

The Party Dress

A Study of Nina Henry by RALEIGH

"If that is what a dress will do to you," Nina thought, "it is all wrong. It isn't fair. It's immoral."

NINA HENRY, who is destined to become one of the most discussed characters in modern fiction, for years had sat in the background of smart country club life.

Still beautiful, still romantic, she had played irreproachably the part of the unrebellious wife.

One evening she put on her new Paris dress. At first she was afraid of herself in the mirror. Suddenly she was a renewed, daring creature, amazing her husband, fascinating the men of her set.

Was the Paris dress to blame or did it merely evoke Nina's smoldering nature? Follow Joseph Hergesheimer in his revelation of the life of a woman of today—beginning in November Cosmopolitan, on sale today.

Preventable Pain!

The man who wouldn't drive his motorcar half a mile when it's out of order, will often drive his brain all day with a head that's throbbing.

Such punishment isn't very good for one's nerves! It's unwise, and it's unnecessary. A tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin will relieve a headache every time. So, remember this accepted antidote for pain, and spare yourself a lot of needless suffering. Read the proven directions and you'll discover many valuable uses for these tablets. For headaches; to check colds. To ease a sore throat and reduce the infection. For relieving neuralgic, neuritic, rheumatic pain.

People used to wonder if Bayer Aspirin was harmful. The doctors answered that question years ago. It is not. Some folks still wonder if it really does relieve pain. That's settled! For millions of men and women have found it does. To cure the cause of any pain you must consult your doctor; but you may always turn to Bayer Aspirin for immediate relief.

"SO MUCH PAIN I WANTED TO DIE"

Flu Victim Spent Weeks in Bed Until He Used World's Tonic.

"When the catarrh and flu hits a man he does not know what is going to happen. I had a severe attack of it last fall. Every muscle and bone in my body ached for ten days or more. Then I appeared to get over it, but I could gain no strength. A little walk would tire me out. After about two weeks of this my stomach got into trouble. No matter what I ate, it seemed to be the wrong thing. Gas would form, and the gas was followed by severe pains around my heart. These grew worse and extended through my abdomen. Eventually they got into my arms and shoulders. I thought I must be getting another attack of the flu. But I had no fever—just a bad stomach and aches and pains. No matter what I did for them, they continued to torment me by day and to keep me awake at night. Those over my kidneys were the worst. I felt like I would break in two whenever I moved," said Carl Riesch, of New Kensington, Pa., when the World's Tonic man met him in a drug store.

"My condition grew worse all of the time. My liver was so sluggish that my eyes began to get yellowish, and my breath became bad. I had to take physics every night to get my bowels to move. I suffered so much pain that I wanted to die. Nothing did me any good, and most of the time I lay in bed. I did not know what was to become of me, and when Christmas came around we were not a very happy family, with our savings being swept away and the wage-earner flat on his back. When I was so weak that every move hurt, Herman Fischer, an old friend of my prosperous days, brought me a new medicine he had heard was helpful for victims of the catarrh and flu. This was World's Tonic. The first thing that occurred when I began taking it was that my liver cleared up. Then my stomach got better. The pains over my kidneys and bladder got well, and in two weeks I was free from all pain. I was so happy that I sent out for my neighbors for a celebration. In four weeks' time I was strong enough to go looking for a job. I found a good one, and I have gained strength and health steadily ever since I took the first dose of this wonderful new medicine. World's Tonic has lifted me from the bed into a happy, useful man once more, and I would be failing in common thankfulness if I did not tell people about the great help this good medicine has been to me." World's Tonic can be had of Dow's (formerly McCulloch's), also May's, and Mayflower, or of any other first class drug store. (B-10)

Two Important Groups Among River Visitors

Much local interest no doubt will be focussed on the five members of President Hoover's cabinet who come here to attend the river celebration this week and to be the honored guests of particular prominence at the banquet Thursday evening. These official visitors are to include James W. Good, secretary of war, who is to speak on the plans of the government for the development of inland waterways; Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury; James J. Davis, secretary of labor; Charles Francis Adams, secretary of the navy; Robert P. Lamont, secretary of commerce.

Inasmuch as the delegation is to include two of our townsmen in Secretaries Mellon and Davis, we assume that the visitors will have to submit to a little prideful pointing out of this or that advantage of Pittsburgh by the two men from this city who have been so long in the national service. We hope so, anyway, for it pleases us to believe that even cabinet officers are human when it comes to boosting the old home town.

Another group in attendance will be made up of prominent railroad executives, including Gen. W. W. Atterbury, Pennsylvania; P. E. Crowley, New York Central; Daniel Willard, Baltimore and Ohio; Charles Denny, Erie, and J. J. Burnet, Chesapeake and Ohio.

One might imagine that the noses of these gentlemen would be a little out of joint, since river transportation, basis of the celebration, supposedly is in competition with that of the railroads. Even to watch what a competitor is doing these men would not be out of place here at this time. But it is quite likely they have a motive, if there be any motive aside from that respectful attendance at an important national event, that is based on vision—that of co-operation in the development of rail-river traffic.

This, of course, will require facilities, and Pittsburgh's official part in the celebration, it has been stated, is to be the announcement of detailed plans for the projected river-rail wharf terminal here. Railroad men, naturally, will be interested in that, since the fulfillment of the plans will call for their aid in making them effective.

Are There Profits?

Somebody Will Divide.

Friends of prohibition will mourn, wets will rejoice reading of a strike in a New York speakeasy. Bartenders paraded up and down, asking public sympathy. Their demands were granted.

Uncle Sam never asked any questions.

Where you have more than 30,000 speakeasies in one big city and proportionate numbers in others somebody will divide the profits, as in the red light districts of long ago.

Bigger the Better

Small Units Are Costly.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad asks permission to absorb the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh.

The Pennsylvania Railroad wants to absorb other properties, making its gigantic system even bigger.

Wisdom would permit such absorption. The bigger the railroad system the better, when bigness means eliminating multiple overhead expense, multiple cost for soliciting freight and passenger traffic and waste from shipping freight and passengers the longest way round.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

SO FAR as our knowledge goes life arises always and only from preceding life. In the past it was believed that there could be a "spontaneous generation" of living things. Aristotle taught that plant-lice arise from the dew which falls upon plants, and that fleas spring from putrid matter.

H. G. Wells

"So may he," said Ross, "doubt whether in cheese and timber worms are generated; or if beetles and wasps in cows' dung; or if butterflies, locusts, grasshoppers, shell-fish, snails, eels, and such like be procreated of putrified matter, which is apt to receive the forms of that creature to which it is by formative power disposed. To question this is to question reason, sense and experience. If he doubts of this let him go to Egypt, and there he will find the fields swarming with mice, begot of the mud of Nylus, to the great calamity of the inhabitants."

Very gradually this error was dispelled. It was only in the middle nineteenth century that the concluding dispute took place over Bastain's assertion that abundant bacterial life appeared in sterilized infusions of hay and other material. Pasteur and others demonstrated the insufficiency of his sterilization.

It is accepted now by all biologists of repute that life arises from life and in no other way—omne vivim ex vivo.

Life as we know it flows in a strictly defined stream from its remote and unknown origins, it dissolves and assimilates food, but it receives no living tributaries.

Yet the distinction of what is living and what is not living is by no means easy.

Seeds, smal: worms and microscopic animalcula can be dried up completely and left totally inert for long periods of time, so that it is impossible to distinguish them from dead organisms; then at the touch of moisture they will resume the recognizable process of life. Do they live meanwhile?

It is at least possible that the distinctive properties of living things depend simply upon the complexity of their molecular organization—in which case, spontaneous generation, under suitable circumstances, is at least credible.

One fact remains, that all the life we know is one continuing sort of life, that all the life which exists at this moment derives, so far as human knowledge goes, in unbroken succession from life in past time, and that the unindividualized nonliving world is separated from it by a definite gap.

3—THE LIMITATIONS OF LIFE IN SPACE.

So far as our certain knowledge goes, life is wholly confined to the surface of the planet Earth and to a few miles above and below its surface. Before we reach the summits of the highest earthly mountains life has practically ceased, and the bottom of the sea is the downward limit of the vital process. Within the earth is lifeless matter, and never in all human experience and observation has there come the slightest intimation of any life beyond our atmosphere.

There is reason to believe that life appeared upon this planet thousands of millions of years ago and that it was confined to warmish saline water. Since then it has extended its range very greatly, in height, in depth and into cold, dry and desolate regions. And it still extends its range. It still presses against its limitations.

Until recently the height record for any living thing was the balloon record of Berson and a companion, made in July, 1901. They certainly reached 34,500 feet, but then they became unconscious in spite of their inhalation of oxygen.

In November, 1927, this was exceeded by Capt. Gray, of the United States Army Aviation service, who reached 42,470 feet. He lost his life through his oxygen running out as he descended. No other living creature, so far as our knowledge goes, has even transcended these limits.

The condor of the Andes is credited with 23,000 feet by Humboldt. At the higher levels these great birds use the passes, flying low and close over the heads of travelers.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Across the Border

ONE government amendment we like is that border inspectors can no longer slap you on the hip pockets.

"Bugs" Baer

We have stood on the Canadian dotted line and watched tourists, salesmen, school teachers and saturated bystanders getting their daily dozen slaps on the mezzanine pockets.

She came back the next day for another treatment.

The slapping was rather embarrassing. Especially if you are guilty.

The courteous inspector asked if you were carrying any laughing waters into the United States.

There was one schnapps custodian on the border whose methods were corrugated and academic. He weighed about 200 pounds in his government sox.

He only slapped us on the hip pocket once. But that slap carried us back across the Niagara Bridge, through Buffalo and well into the Mohawk Valley.

The unfairness of the slapping method was that it hurt worse if you didn't have a bottle there to take up the shock of recoil.

We wish to thank John Government for curtailing the slapping concession on the border. We never did like a war in which there was no retaliation.

THE ROBOT GOES TO WAR

By Herbert Kaufman

WHILE President Hoover and Premier MacDonald exchange peace coos, and discuss the erection of an international dove-cote with the financial timbers of demolished arsenals, the War Department proceeds with scheduled plans.

Field trials at Aberdeen introduce advance fashions in military equipment, and show the latest kinks in artillery, fighting tanks and sky-bombs.

AND if some country, over-confident of its aerial strength, should suddenly fling a flying squadron across the Atlantic, America is now prepared to welcome its arrival with parks of electrically-controlled guns, with automatic range-finders that never muff their target.

These incredibly precise weapons maintain an impassable three-mile barrier. They are sighted by infra-violet lamps, worked at deflected angles to conceal the location of defenses from enemy observers.

We all HOPE that the great minds of the world will produce a scheme to do away with war.

But in the meanwhile, the possession of such contraptions DOES comfort the future—especially since experts announce the possibility of teaching these SAME robots to load and fire without manual assistance.

FROM that miracle, it's a short step to radio-guided combat planes and the prophesied use of synthetic lightning bolts. All of which evokes the picture of impersonal battle with mechanical champions contending against wireless-brained foes.

The opening engagements of the next big war promises to be fought along those lines. Enemy territory will be devastated in advance, clearing the way for armies of occupation (and without risk of carnage) to seize prostrated domain.

Of course it SEEMS improbable. But we're already witnessing greater wizardries in broadcasting programs and on the silver screen.

Anything can be done with the present tool chests. Genius may snaffle the electron before the month's out—and train the horrendous might of mother matter to slay and ravage at command.

If war isn't soon halted, we may as well quit everything else.

If the Twentieth Century can't find a bloodless method to adjudicate differences, the hellish ingenuity of science will deliver a charred rubbish heap to the Twenty-first Century.

Earthly fortunes are marching toward the cross-roads of crisis, and less than a hundred years will tell whether barbaric invention or enlightenment will respectively annihilate or preserve tomorrow.

A generation, which has revolutionized thought in every other field—possessed of every instrumentality to co-ordinate universal sentiment, and bring the furthest removed tribe within the circle of education—should certainly contrive a brake upon the Car of Juggernaut.

If we DON'T we DESERVE what's coming.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

THAT dish the Italians call "ping"—!

If they served it to you in the Ritz-Carlton they'd probably charge $3.50 and you'd pay it gladly for you'd swear that the makings had been gathered on Orion and baked on the Morning Star. It isn't a dish . . . it's an experience! And yet, actually, nothing could be simpler. I have been making it this morning with Eda Barlupi and I know.

In plain English, it's stuffed squash. Not our summer squash but that mottled green squash the Italians have named "coucksini" . . . you pronounce it soo-kee-nee.

I gathered mine this morning in the meadow below my camp in the Sierra Nevada. The woods were dark, still heavy with sleep . . . the pale sky gleamed with the coming of dawn like a vast, hollow pearl. Quail scuttled off through the grass as I came down the trail—a deer lifted his head from the spring, then melted into the shadow. The air was sharp with the smell of pine and tar weed. Somewhere a woodpecker had begun his hammering . . . But to get back to the squash—

A common vegetable growing in common earth. A dark green globe of raw food, crisp with dew, which—after you've made your fire of manzanita roots—you halve, without peeling, and boil until tender, but not soft. After it's cold you scoop out the insides and make the stuffing.

(It's better, of course, to have plump, merry Eda Barlupi with you when you make that stuffing—with her laughter bubbling through the warm, sweet kitchen and the mountain sunlight lying in a great, golden pool on the floor. But even without her, ping's ping.)

Where was I? Oh, yes—that stuffing. Mash the scoopings in a wooden bowl, then to it add . . . thick olive oil, green gold, hand pressed beneath gnarled trees on sun drenched slopes . . . the juicy, pungent tips of basalico, which English people call "sweet basil" . . . bread crumbs, if possible broken from a home baked, rough, round loaf . . . salt, pepper, onions, garlic, of course . . . eggs to thicken . . . grated Parmesan cheese, its fluffy curds like snow against the ruddy yolks, the dark green herbs . . . a little sausage, if you like the taste . . . mix, fill the shells, then bake—and laugh at the Ritz-Carlton!

A magic dish—and yet its magic made of very common things. Spring water, sunshine, deep black forest mold, old herbs and oil, dried cheese, some eggs and squash—not "made for fancy"—made because such simple things are close at hand and good—yet out of that necessity comes art!

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

No Casual Word

THERE is no casual word. We know
More surely as the swift years flow
That every syllable Time sent
Fell on our ears by sure intent,
That every syllable Time sent
Was given in answer to some need.

There is no useless dream or hope
For, ever, as we onward grope
Toward better things and clearer sight,
Each cherished vision leads to light,
Each vital longing we possessed
Has waked new powers in the breast.

There is no bondage that can bind
The spirit, keep the soul confined;
No tyranny that can deny
Love's ever-wise activity;
No casual word or thought. Why fret?
Each need will in good time be met!

'Gold, Gold, Yellow, Cold'

Men Search, Fight and Die for It.

GETTING GOLD BY "DRY BLOWING"

This picture shows an Australian extracting gold from the earth. Unlike the early American gold seekers in California, who "washed" their gold in running streams, this gold hunter fills his pan with earth, sand and gravel, and pours it slowly out into another pan. The wind blows away the dust. The heavy particles of gold, if any, fall straight into the pan.

After this process the man blows with all his might and main on the contents of the pan. Other things are blown to one side, the gold, of greater weight, remains.

In some parts of Australia the process is called "dollying" for gold. Gold bearing rock is crushed by hand power to a fine powder, then washed in water, the gold remaining.

All over the world men seek, and have sought for gold. Far back before history began, savages searched for the precious metal.

A gold rush carries not merely adventurers, men out of work, but those that would find success if they would but stay where they are.

Primitive savages look for gold in streams, and Uncle Sam stores it away, billions of dollars' worth, and makes it the basis of financial and industrial operations amounting to hundreds of billions.

For gold men hunt, rush, fight and kill each other. Their time comes and they go. LEAVING the gold behind knowing too late that it amounts to little.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Frank Ward O'Malley, writing in the old Sun, is credited with giving that salty strip bounded by Fifth and Tenth avenue and Herald Square and Columbus Circle the title "The Roaring Forties." It is a phrase from windjammer sailing days and is fitting for the messy turmoil that district calls life.

It literally roars—often in monotone but mostly in a fierce jangle. The hub-bub begins with the rattle of ash cans and the rumble of milk wagons at 5 a. m. People several blocks away can hear its incessant cacophony. It plays a conspicuous part in promoting Manhattan's perpetual hypochondria.

It is a curious medley as distinct as the "cries of London." Madly claxoning motor horns, the screech of the elevated's steel against steel, the bump of surface cars, the doleful drone of subway, the shrill shouts of newsies—echoing and reverberating through the deep canyons.

Strangers landing in this midtown confusion require days to adjust themselves. Some never do. New Yorkers on trips from home are often accused of being loud of speech. They usually are but it is a natural result of pitching voices high to be heard above the din.

The 40's do not simmer down to a hum until long after midnight. Perhaps the noisiest period of all is the after theater hour. When the lull finally comes, it brings out the strange shuffling creatures that are a part of the Broadway night—furtive, fever-eyed, shadowy!

In the tumult the serenest yet hardest boiled block is on West Forty-seventh street between Fifth and Sixth avenues, dotted with theatrical inns, chop houses, speakeasies and beauty parlors. The women are glossily taut with that isolation of ladies who have lov'd only love. The men are tight-lipped—sinister!

Under hotel canopies and on rooming house steps the burlesque and small time troupers collect and often chat until the pink of dawn. In the doorways sleep those raggy gutter nomads whose lives are whetted to a sharpness on the city's flagstones.

Two-toned pajamas are now the billiards. The jacket is in one color and the trousers in another. Among samples in a dazzling window display today were those with white trousers and black jacket, red trousers and green jacket and—Oh, gracious sakes—mauve trousers and salmon pink jacket.

A salesman confides the old fashioned over-the-head night shirt has not been entirely abandoned. It has devotees, and that's comforting to those brought up on empty flour sacks with cut-out arm holes. They are not popular only with the old boys, either. He tells me one of the old-fashioned night gownists is one of the hottest of screen lovers. It's like thinking of Clara Bow in musty black mohair with a bustle.

* * *

In France there are night shirts with starched bosoms, collars and cuffs, which may be all right after all if one just wants to sit up in bed and look pretty.

* * *

The most expensive slumber garment made in New York was fashioned for the Duke of Manchester, who married a Cincinnati heiress. The material from which the pajamas were cut was of some rare Persian silk costing $150 a yard. The monogram topped by the family crest was so elaborate the charge was $200. Four buttons down the front were encrusted with vari-colored chip jewels. The biggest collection of pajamas is said to be owned by Adolph Menjou, the movie actor.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

THERE was a big game hunter that come back from Africa for the lecture season and was getting his act all oiled up at a club meeting one night. A camera guy that had a lot of pictures to show in a lecture he was rehearsing met this returned hunter, and they got to talking.

"Well," says the camera guy, "I like to go out and take pictures of the wild game, but I can't see for the life of me how you can destroy wild life with a gun. I wouldn't have the heart to do it."

"Say," says the hunter, "you remember the time you took me out to Minnesota to get some pictures with you. You drove in your car, and you destroyed more life on the road out there than I'd have the heart to destroy in Africa."

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

EMPLOYERS would get more and better work from their employes if they would explain why they want a thing done a certain way.

Intelligent workers are especially anxious to know why things are done a certain way. And it is from intelligent help that best results come.

If a man has sufficient intelligence to be entrusted with a certain piece of work he generally has mentality enough to understand the matter if it is explained to him in the proper way.

Men are more than a piece of machinery. They are humanly entitled to courtesy and consideration.

There is a far different spirit in the plant where, from the big boss down, there is incentive to think and to suggest, and where information is given which enlightens the worker on the important part his job plays in the ultimate result.
